Labor, Tax Bills Loaded With TNT For Truman

Major Showdown With GOP Is Due On Veto Question In Next Few Days

Congress is prepared today to unload two bills packed with political dynamite on President Truman's desk in the next few days for the first major showdown between him and the Republican lawmakers who hope to oust him from the White House in 1948.

They are the four-billion-dollar plan to give 45 million income taxpayers cuts ranging from 30 to 10½ per cent beginning July 1, and the omnibus labor control measure.

Associates of Mr. Truman expect him to veto the tax bill, barring a last minute change of mind.

What the President will do about the labor bill is a mystery.

Some of Mr. Truman's advisers expect him to sign the bill, even though he is opposed to some of its features.

If he should veto both, both GOP and Democratic leaders are predicting that:

1. Congress would uphold a veto of tax reduction, thus killing virtually all chances of any cuts this year.

2. Congress would enact the labor law revisions, despite a veto, and they will become law.

House Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, took the lead last night in a determined GOP effort to point up both issues for the 1948 presidential campaign. Martin, like other Republican leaders, concentrated his fire on the tax measures. The GOP admittedly lacks the necessary two thirds vote to pass it over a veto.

Rates Called "Confiscatory"

He issued a statement declaring that present income tax levies are "confiscatory" and calling on the Chief Executive to lower them as a boon to business and labor, and a blockade against depression.

"It is absolutely essential for us to avoid a depression if we are to keep America solvent and able to contribute to the rehabilitation of the rest of the world," he said. "If America should experience a slump now, the effect would be disastrous upon every country.

"The tax reduction bill will go far to prevent this. That is why I hope and believe it will be signed by the President."

The final draft of the measure, whipped up at a meeting of Senate and House conferees last Thursday, comes up for action in the House today. Overwhelming approval is expected. The Senate may act the same day, thus enabling it to be sent to the White House by Tuesday.

The labor bill is slated for House action Wednesday and Senate approval a day later. Some lively argument may develop, since the bill has been stripped of many of the most drastic House provisions and has been left largely in the milder form in which it originally was passed by the Senate. But it still goes far beyond the labor-management program Mr.

As Thousands Welcomed the Circus to Town

Senators Call U. S. Judges In Vote Probe

4 to Explain Why Jury Didn't Study Kansas City Election

By John L. Steele
United Press Staff Writer

Chairman Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) of the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee announced yesterday that three Kansas City Federal judges and the United States district attorney have been invited to appear here Friday and state why they decided against a grand jury investigation of alleged frauds in the 1946 Missouri primary election.

Asked to testify were Judges John C. Collet, Albert L. Reeves and Albert A. Ridge, and District Attorney Sam Wear. Collet is a close personal friend of President Truman. All represented the western Missouri Federal district from which Mr. Truman hails.

The subcommittee began investigating the election last week to determine whether the full committee should inquire into why the Department of Justice failed to act in the face of evidence tending to show frauds marked the defeat of Representative Roger C. Slaughter (D., Mo.) for renomination.

Truman Opposed Axtell

Slaughter was defeated by Enos Axtell, whom President Truman indorsed, in a three-corner race with Jerome Walsh. Slaughter was the only Democratic congressional candidate personally opposed by the President. Axtell won the nomination but was defeated in November by Republican Albert L. Reeves, jr.

The subcommittee wants to know what specific evidence Wear gave the judges which caused them to rule there was insufficient evidence to warrant grand jury action.

The investigation gets under way again Thursday with United States Attorney General Tom C. Clark on the stand, to be followed by Director J. Edgar Hoover of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Clark told the committee last week that there was no evidence of a Federal offense such as conspiracy.

Senator James P. Kem (R., Mo.), who instigated the inquiry, was represented by associates as believing that the three judges did not have "all the evidence of alleged fraud at their disposal" when they found no cause for grand jury action.

The subcommittee also may look into charges that impounded primary ballots were stolen from the vaults of the Missouri election commission last week as the hearing here began.

10,000 Swarm Lot as Circus Sets Up Shop

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

It was a hot day. The sun boiled down, no respecter of persons, large or small, fat or thin. It was dusty, too.

But the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey circus came to town.

And do you think the dust and the grit and the heat kept people away?

Not by 10,000 souls it didn't.

There were at least that many people, a good 50 per cent of them youngsters, who swarmed over the Benning railroad yards, and over the circus lot at Benning rd. and Oklahoma ave. ne. yesterday.

The kids, young and old, came from nearby and downtown, and from Virginia and from Maryland. And though there wasn't anything glamorous to see—no pretty girls in spangles, no clowns nor acrobats—they stood around and watched

Unidentified Man Leaps 250 Feet From N. Y. Bridge

New York, June 1 (U.P.).—An unidentified man climbed the five-foot railing on the George Washington Bridge today and dived into the water, 250 feet below.

Police believed that he was instantly killed. Harbor patrol launches were ordered out to search for the body.

Ralph Baumgarner said he was walking on the north crosswalk when the man ran past him, flinging off his coat and a pair of harlequin-styled eyeglasses.

Baumgarner said the man then climbed the rail and flung himself off. The coat had no identification in it. Police said it was expensive and bore the label of a Baltimore, Md., store.

U. S. Officials Optimistic on Coal Situation

Pending Labor Bill Would Make Strike Ill-Timed, They Say

By the United Press

Government sources last night were optimistic that new efforts for a soft coal wage contract would be made before the Taft-Hartley labor control bill reaches President Truman for signature.

Officials long associated with coal negotiations said that, on the basis of published demands of President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers (AFL) and operators' offers, there is "much reason" to believe the parties can reach an agreement by June 30.

The UMW's current contract with the Government expires, with Federal authority to operate the mines, on June 30. Unless a new agreement is reached, it appears almost certain the miners will quit under their policy of "no contract, no work."

Strike Would Be Ill-Timed

One source believed that renewed efforts to write a contract would come by June 15 because Lewis would have no desire to give Mr. Truman a glaring reason for signing the Taft-Hartley bill.

The UMW has been one of the principal contributors to the AFL advertising fund urging the President to veto the measure which is expected to reach the White House for signature or veto around June 15.

(Senator Young (R., N. Dak.) predicted the prospect of a mine walkout would enable sponsors of the labor legislation which Congress is to pass finally this week to override a veto if President Truman refuses to sign it.

("This puts the President in more of a hole if he vetoes the labor bill," Young told an Associated Press reporter.

(Senator Hill (Alabama), Democratic whip and member of the Labor Committee who voted against the bill, commented that the collapse of the coal negotiations "will make it more difficult for the President to veto the bill, but I still think he will veto it."

(The measure, as approved by a Senate-House conference committee, would enable the Government to obtain an injunction against a

31 Are Dead In Arkansas Tornado Path

Hundreds Injured, Homeless Near Pine Bluff; Police Count 35 Victims

Pine Bluff, Ark., June 1 (A.P.).—At least 31 persons were killed, hundreds injured and hundreds of others made homeless late today when a tornado swept through one of the South's most heavily populated plantation regions near here.

The 31 bodies were in mortuaries. State police said 35 were known dead. A number of children were killed.

Officials said it was impossible to estimate the final death toll, and Mayor George Steed declared that there "is no telling how many were injured." The number of homeless was estimated at more than 500.

Narrowly Misses City

Davis Hospital—only hospital here—reported at 9:30 p. m. (central standard time) it had given emergency treatment to more than 300 persons. Others were being routed to the station hospital at nearby Pine Bluff Arsenal.

The twister narrowly missed the south end of this city of 40,000.

Taxicabs and private automobiles were pressed into service to assist ambulances in bringing the dead and injured to Pine Bluff.

Several small rural communities were in the path of the storm and some virtually were wiped out. Union, Watsons Chapel and Main st. pike were hit.

Families Wiped Out

Mayor Steed said it might take 24 hours to complete rescue operations.

Steed said the path of the storm was at least 29 miles long and "up to 10 miles wide."

"Whole families—Negro and white—were wiped out. I saw 10 Negroes all in one heap. The buildings were levelled.

"Communications are impossible and motor traffic is moving under the greatest difficulty. Every ambulance is running to capacity every trip and we are using taxicabs and trucks to bring the people in. The storm extended roughly from 10 miles west of here to 10 miles east of here."

The fringe of the storm buffeted Pine Bluff's southern outskirts, damaging the Pine Bluff country clubhouse.

Torrential rain and a hail storm followed the tornado. Every physician and nurse in this community was mobilized.

Six Dead in Oklahoma

In Leedey, Okla., six were killed last night and some 25 injured when a tornado leveled three fourths of the town of 600 residents.

Last night's tornado swung south after entering Oklahoma from Higgins, Tex. It passed near Arnett, Okla., and Gage, Okla., and missed Woodward, where 102 died in April's blow.

Pravda Protests Use of Displaced Russians Abroad

Moscow, June 1 (U.P.).—The Soviet Union has no intention of relinquishing its citizenship claim on thousands of Russians still in displaced persons or prisoner of war camps in western Europe and never will recognize the legality of their recruitment for labor abroad, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda indicated today.

A dispatch in Pravda said the plan to send 300,000 displaced persons in the Anglo-American zones to France as workers was an "impermissible transaction."

D. C. Holiday Travel Believed Record Since Prewar Days

It was the biggest single-day traffic flow, a Union Station train clerk said, since prewar days.

Airlines reported every seat taken on both incoming and outgoing flights—this despite last week's commercial plane disasters.

Two airlines, Capital and American, added extra planes between here and Pittsburgh, Norfolk and New York.

At National Airport, dozens waited in line during the late afternoon and early evening for possible last-minute cancellations of reservations.

Airline and railroad officials declined to estimate the number of travelers, but all said the volume, culminating the long Memorial Day weekend, was greater than they had expected.

The homeward rush lasted until early this morning.

To thousands from midafternoon until midnight only standing room was available on both incoming and outgoing trains. Buses also were filled with passengers from Maryland and Virginia resorts.

Pennsylvania Railroad operated nine extra sessions on New York bound trains, in addition to extra coaches, in an attempt to meet the demand.

Eighteen extra sections and extra cars were scheduled. Union Station officials said, on Pennsylvania trains from New York during the afternoon and night.

Baltimore & Ohio added one extra outbound train, and three extra sessions to incoming trains.

All southbound trains, Union Station said, were adding extra coaches, but aisles were packed with standing passengers reminiscent of wartime travel.

The weekend ended with perfect holiday weather.

Visitors here, as well as Washingtonians, filled parks and recreation facilities. Highways were busy with Sunday afternoon motorists. Others took to boats on the Potomac and its tributaries.

The warm sun which took the temperature to 79 at 4:45 p. m. sent thousands to swimming pools and to streetside parks for sunbathing.

The District Information Bureau, maintained by Washington Board of Trade's Greater National Capital Committee, reported a sharp decrease yesterday in the number of requests for lodging. Although hotels overflowed Friday, the bureau reported lodging was found for all visitors who appealed to the bureau.

Nature's Just Too Grand

Owls Invade Silver Spring While Bees Buzz on E Street

Washington area residents had an opportunity to learn about the birds and the bees yesterday.

In Silver Spring, the 700 block of Pershing dr. was literally alive with owls. In the District the 1900 block of E st. nw. was simply swarming with bees. In each case residents, unable to cope with so much rural life, called for police aid and got rid of the invaders.

The owls—five of them—had been frightening the Pershing dr. neighbors by striking women and children on the head for the past few days, according to Mrs. Harry M. Lerch of 718 Pershing dr.

Her daughter, Irene, 22, was struck on the head by an owl as she was coming up the walk, Mrs. Lerch said. Her other daughter, Lois Jane, 13, was sitting on the porch one evening this week with a friend when they were pursued into the house by the "hoot birds" wheeling around and hitting them on the head.

Called by Mrs. Orville E. Magby of 718 Pershing dr., Capt. Joseph B. Nolte and Sergt. Melvin Wheeler of Montgomery County police found five small owls. Nolte went to his house and brought back an air pistol. With five shots, he and Wheeler, both members of the Montgomery Pistol Club, wiped out the Silver Spring owl mob.

Meanwhile, residents of the 1900 block of E st., in the heart of the city, were being startled by a buzzing, businesslike swarm of bees which settled on a tree in front of No. 1909.

When police were notified, they knew what to do. They immediately called Bee-Man Floyd Roberts, 920 S. Taylor st., Arlington, Va., who is more or less "on call" for such dilemmas.

Roberts, who has 70 hives at his place in Arlington just as a hobby, arrived and set to work to capture the swarm. Without any protection, he climbed atop his car and first tried to break off the tree branch

Universal Training Imperative for U. S., Commission Advises

Economic Aims Unchanged

American Policy in Europe Dealt Blow by Hungary Coup

(Related Story on Page 4)

Post Reporter

Russia has jolted American policy in Europe with the apparent seizure of power by the Communist Party in Hungary.

It has not, however, diverted American policy makers from their plans for economic recovery in Western Europe.

There is little doubt in Washington that the Kremlin planned the Hungarian move carefully, timed it adroitly, and executed it with the same disregard of legality that has marked previous Soviet moves for control in Romania and Bulgaria.

It has reminded American policy-makers that the Kremlin has not yet stopped its tactics of pushing to find some "soft spot" around the vast perimeter of the Soviet Union. The process was checked during the past year in Korea, Iran, Turkey and Greece, but it still goes on.

Toward the end of the recent Moscow conference it was apparent that the Soviet leaders were willing to block an Austrian treaty because they still had unfinished political business in Hungary. A settlement with Austria would have required the withdrawal of Soviet communications forces from Austria's next-door neighbor.

Official Washington now sees clearly why the Russians were not ready to withdraw. They were displeased with the success of the anti-Communist Small Holders' Party in Hungary, and with the friendliness of its leaders toward the West. They wanted to make sure that a Communist regime, with all the apparatus of a police state, was as firmly in the saddle in Hungary as in Romania and Bulgaria.

Although the State Department has not yet announced its decision of what it will do about Hungary, it knows the United States can do little except to protest as loudly as possible. Hungary, unlike Iran, Turkey or Greece, is a country where the Soviet army is already in occupation. The United States has no physical power there that can match the vehemence of its protests.

The gold that formerly belonged to Hungary has already been returned by the United States occupation authorities in Germany; the United States no longer has this

Survey Group Tells Truman Security And Foreign Policy Call for Adoption

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

President Truman's Universal Training Advisory Commission yesterday recommended adoption of universal military training as "an essential element" of national security and foreign policy.

"We recommend the adoption of universal training," the commission reported, "because we are convinced that weakness on our part not only involves our country in grave risks but also weakens the United Nations, on which rest our hopes for lasting peace. A weak and irresolute America is an invitation to failure. A strong and resolute America is the best guarantee for our safety and for the success of the United Nations."

"Obligation" for Youth

It should be the "obligation," the commission said, of every young man on reaching 18 or completing high school to "undergo a period of training which would fit him for service to the Nation in time of any future crisis."

Such service, it said, should include six months of basic training in camp or aboard ship under Army or Navy supervision and an additional unspecified period of supplementary service. This latter would include service in a civilian component of one of the forces or special training for appointment as an officer for technical proficiency.

For "practical reasons" the commission excluded training of women "at this stage." It suggested that the possibility of including women should be studied by a commission set up to administer the program. It recommended in turn that this commission should consist of two civilians and one military representative, reporting directly to the President.

Would Use Draft Boards

Dr. Karl T. Compton, chairman, told a White House news conference immediately after delivery of the report to Mr. Truman that it was estimated the program would cost 1½ to 2 billion dollars a year. He said it could be started approximately one year after Congress legislated it into being.

Dr. Compton said he believed the Selective Service System, including local boards, should be revived to screen young men for service. This system, the commission itself pointed out, would then be available in case of war.

As for the obligation of young men to serve their country, the commission agreed that no loopholes should be left, or opportunities for evasion.

"For each youth who is physically and mentally qualified therefor," it said, "such training should be of a predominantly military character and specifically designed to prepare him for service in one of the armed forces. For those who are unfitted for training of this nature, the program should be preparatory for service to the Nation

U. S., Russia End Dispute Over Korea

Democratic Parties Will Be Consulted In Drafting of Plan

Seoul, June 1 (A.P.).—The United States and Russia have settled the chief difference which disrupted last year's negotiations on a provisional government for Korea, a joint communique said today.

The communique said the United States-Soviet Commission had agreed in principle to consult Korean democratic parties and social organizations on a broad basis in drafting a government plan for the jointly-occupied territory.

A year ago the United States held out for a broad consultation whereas the Russians refused to deal with parties which had opposed a Korean trusteeship—thus, in effect, excluding all but Korean Communists.

The respective views on consultation were given the commission last week by Maj. Gen. Albert A. Brown and Col. Gen. T. F. Shtikov, heads of their respective delegations.

A commission spokesman said they followed positions outlined by Secretary of State Marshall and Foreign Minister Molotov and "are not too far apart."

A subcommission was instructed to draft proposals on consultation procedure, covering who shall represent the political groups, how many groups will be consulted and how to obtain a majority opinion of the population.

The commission announced it had relaxed its press policy and would publish bulletins after each session in addition to joint communiques after each major issue is settled.

Brown and Shtikov also were authorized to inform the press on matters not secret.

U. S. Planning To Let Reich Have 50 Ships

Hoover's Proposal For Food Transport Arouses Opposition

By William F. McManamin
United Press Staff Writer

Despite sharp opposition from shipping interests and seafarer unions, the Administration is going ahead with plans to place 50 Liberty ships at Germany's disposal to transport vitally needed food, it was revealed yesterday.

Former President Herbert Hoover suggested the program last February after his tour of European food shortage areas for President Truman, and Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson immediately put his experts to work on it. The State Department and the United States Maritime Commission are cooperating closely.

Petersen in Berlin

In addition Assistant Secretary of War Howard C. Petersen is in Berlin conferring with Gen. Lucius D. Clay, United States commander in Europe, on how the program can be made effective.

The plan has a dual objective. First, it would provide Germany with shipping. The German merchant fleet was depleted under terms of the Potsdam agreement. Second, the American vessels would be manned by German crews who would be paid in marks. This would save large amounts of dollars which otherwise would come from American pockets.

Mr. Hoover estimated that by paying all expenses, except fuel, in marks, the taxpayers would be saved 40 million dollars a year. He also said that more savings could be made by using the vessels to return American war equipment from abroad.

Sources at the War Department, which is directing the plan, said that shipping companies, which rely on exports, as well as the seamen's unions are raising strong objections but that, as soon as these

Sen. White Plans Not to Run Again, Maine Paper Says

Lewiston, Me., June 1 (A.P.).—The Lewiston Sun says it has received from Senator Wallace White (R., Me.) a formal statement announcing his retirement from public office.

(In Washington, the 69-year-old majority leader had declined to confirm or deny the report, saying "I'm not ready to talk about it."

The Sun statement reads:

"I now announce that long and thoughtful consideration have persuaded me that I should not seek further service in the Senate. It is early to reach such a decision, but having done so I think it wise to make it known.

"At the expiration of my term I hope to renew old acquaintances, go fishing and in other ways enjoy in full measure our beloved State.

White declined to comment on the announcement of Representative Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.) that she would be a candidate to succeed him.

Still No Singing Commercials

Russia Likes Advertisements, Radio Moscow Discovers

Moscow, June 1 (U.P.).—Radio Moscow began broadcasting commercial spot announcements for the first time this weekend and a check of the average Russian citizen disclosed an audience listening happily to the advertisements and demanding more.

Eleven organizations—theaters, stores and factories—pioneered the innovation with spot announcements for which they paid an undisclosed amount to Radio Moscow on a straight commercial basis.

The announcements are more like the reading of the classified section of a newspaper than the pattern familiar to American radio listeners. They are lumped together into eight minutes of solid announcements and broadcast three times a day—morning, noon and midevening.

Soviet citizens have listened to them for two days now. Muscovites still have difficulty getting newspapers because of the newsprint shortage and they have greeted the commercials as a real service in supplying information.

"We like announceemnts," one typical listener said. "It will be wonderful if they just get more of them. More advertising programs would be very helpful."

Seven of the first commercials were straight, unadorned announcements of current attractions at various theaters and movie houses.

In another, the Lenin District Department Store announced it had a large assortment of the latest fashions, particularly children's wear, and a nice selection of porcelain and crystal gifts.

A typewriter repair shop announced that it buys, sells and contracts for the maintenance of typewriters, adding machines and cash registers. This announcement was the only one to show a symptom of the American technique—it repeated its address and telephone number twice.

in whatever capacities they might best serve."

Conscientious objectors should be given nonmilitary training which would make them useful to the country in time of war, the commission said. Only those young men would be relieved of the obligation to train in one way or another "who could not perform any useful form of service in time of crisis for which preparatory training would be of any value."

The commission said it was in unanimous agreement on all points and gave three basic reasons for its conclusions. They were:

1. That the belief of other nations that the United States was stripping itself of strength was a deterrent to the effectiveness of the United Nations and adoption of universal military training would reassure those nations.

2. That universal military training was the only alternative to a huge and expensive professional military establishment for the maintenance of essential security.

3. That the atomic bomb had eliminated all former concepts of "zones of safety" in any attack on this country and had added to the need for trained men in every city and town.

In connection with the atom bomb attack, the commission considered and discarded the argument "most frequently put forward" that the atomic bomb has rendered armies useless.

"We reject this conclusion," it said, "because our analysis of the possible types and conditions of future warfare convinces us that increased, rather than decreased, numbers of trained troops would be quickly required for home defense, for effective counterattack, and for complete victory."

Dr. Compton supplemented this view in his White House news conference.

"Although the first part of the book may seem a little lurid," he said, referring to that part of the report dealing with the nature of possible future warfare, "we wanted to consider the worst that could possibly happen and be prepared for that. Anything less would be worthless."

"We do not wish, however," the commission added in its report, "to exaggerate the benefits that would be derived from the establishment of a universal training program. It offers no cheap or easy ticket to security. Only when combined with the other elements that enter into a balanced security system would it provide the measure of strength necessary to deter an aggressor from taking up arms against us or from violating the rights of less powerful nations."

Eight-Point Plan Given

The commission outlined an eight-point plan without which it said no program for national security would be complete. (See accompanying outline of the eight points.)

Although the commission throughout its report employed the euphemism "universal training" suggested by Mr. Truman, it left no doubt that it was recommending universal military training, with emphasis on the military phase and for reasons of military security.

"Military necessity must be its principal emphasis and concern," it said at one point. "This does not mean that there cannot and should not be substantial accommodations in the interest of other values. But no program which fails to provide the necessary military benefits would be warranted."

"Moreover," it said at another point, "any attempt to convert a military program into general training would inevitably impair its military advantages."

Suggestions had been made during public discussion of universal military training that health or physical education or citizenship be made the primary objective of the program if adopted, with military training secondary. It had even been suggested that a free high school year be given to all young people.

The commission gave 12 specific reasons why universal military training would benefit the Nation. They were:

1. It would shorten the time in which an effective fighting force could be mobilized in case of war.

2. It would give young men the essentials of training which would, in the event of war, result in saving lives.

3. It would make possible an effective National Guard and Organized Reserve capable of rapid absorption into the fighting forces in case of war.

4. It would improve the efficiency, quality, and alertness of the Regular forces in peacetime.

5. It would help produce qualified Reserve officers in sufficient numbers to meet immediate requirements in a crisis.

6. It would present additional opportunities for inculcating spiritual and moral ideals in support of the American democracy.

7. It would establish a pool of young, physically fit and trained reserves.

8. It would provide a large trained element in every community capable of withstanding and dealing with the problems of civilian defense and disaster resulting from bombing attacks.

9. It would provide a mechanism that could be converted immediately into a wartime selective service system with a continuing inventory of useful skills.

10. It would help to channel qualified young men into programs of scientific and vocational training in fields important to national defense.

11. It would bring together young Americans from all parts of the country to share a common experience and fulfill a common obligation to their country, thus contributing to national unity.

12. It would give greater military strength at less cost than would be provided by a large standing military force.

The commission prefaced its recommendations with an exhaustive study not only of the problems and procedures of universal training itself but of the national and international factors which entered into its conclusions. It included also studies of universal training in other countries. The 448-page document may be purchased from the superintendent of documents for 75 cents.

In addition to Dr. Compton, members of the commission were Joseph E. Davies, former Ambassador to Russian; Dr. Daniel Poling, editor of the Christian Herald; Judge Samuel I. Rosenman of New York; Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, industrial relations counsel; Truman K. Gibson, jr., lawyer and former aide to the Secretary of War; Dr. Harold W. Dodds, president of Princeton University; the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., vice president of Georgetown University, and Charles E. Wilson, president of the General Electric Co.

The commission was appointed December 19, 1946, and shortly thereafter began its study, during which it heard some 200 witnesses "representing every shade and variety of opinion." It also reported that it had studied previous testimony on the subject and published opinions which were available and had held many private interviews throughout the country.

The breakdown of negotiations between Lewis and northern and western operators Saturday came much farther in advance of a strike deadline than in other past years, it was pointed out. But the positions of both parties are now known and the way is cleared for Government mediators to attempt a settlement if the deadlock continues.

The Government has no intention of stepping in at this time.

Lewis has made no comment on the stalemate. Meantime, his negotiators are preparing to resume talks with Southern operators here on Tuesday.

The Northern and Western operators, while announcing the breakdown, were still hopeful of an agreement before the June 30 deadline. Charles O'Neill, their spokesman, said the parties were "essentially in accord" or we can settle that matter" on the issues in dispute.

The big difference is over the amount of a wage increase. The operators offered to increase the present $1.185 an hour rate by 15 cents to $1.335. The boost is the same amount which settled wage demands in other basic industries, O'Neill pointed out. He said that Lewis wants an increase, however, of 35 cents an hour to $1.535.

The operators said this demand was "unreasonable."

List of Recommendations For U. S. Security Program

Following are highlights of the "recommendations" released last night by President Truman's Advisory Commission on Universal Training:

"In the light of the conditions that exist in the world today, no program for national security would be complete unless it encompassed all of the following ingredients:

"1. A strong united, healthy and informed Nation—This is our No. 1 security requirement. It is the bedrock on which all our military preparations depend. The vigor and vitality of our democracy, as expressed in improved health, education, productivity and morale of the American people, are of paramount importance, not only for ourselves but also for millions subject to the deception of totalitarian philosophies abroad.

"2. A coordinated intelligence service—Only through the most diligent collection and the most exhaustive analysis of every scrap of data that might shed light on the war plans of a potential enemy or the extension of his sphere of influence can we hope to make up for the 'cushion of time' that has been taken away from us by the deadly speed of air and atomic attacks.

"3. Scientific Research and Development—No lesson of World War II was more convincing to the American people than the effectiveness of science in providing potent new instrumentalities of warfare. We strongly indorse continued interest in and support of both basic and applied research by the armed forces, and specifically add our recommendation in favor of legislation to establish a national science foundation.

"4. Industrial Mobilization—The development of new weapons will be of no value unless our scientific progress is matched by industrial readiness for the problems of war that may come without warning at supersonic speeds. Weapons that were not in being and in the possession of our troops when an aggressor struck would be worthless in inflicting swift retribution upon him or in preventing his approach to our shores. Because of the danger that production centers would be demolished in the first days of war, a start should be made now toward decentralizing the most vital plants and, in some cases, toward building underground or otherwise adequately protected facilities. Critical war materials must be stockpiled now and in the future.

"5. A striking Air Force—Spearhead of our professional armed services, this force would be charged with the crucial mission of 'defense by attack.' Its job would be to stop the enemy's first onslaught and to hit back at him with crushing force. We believe that an aggressor's reluctance to start a war, and his handicap in prosecuting it successfully if he did start, would be in direct proportion to the power and redines of our mobile striking force. Its personnel would have to be highly trained and its equipment would have to be the most advanced in the world.

"6. Other elements of the Regular Army, Navy, Air Forces, Marine Corps, and Merchant Marine—Long range operations of great destructive power and control of strategic bases might be decisive elements in determining the outcome of a war. Since we could not under our Constitution and would not under our conception of international morality launch a surprise attack against any country without an open declaration of war, the enemy would have the advantage of surprise. Replacements would have to be available speedily in large numbers. Maintenance of planes, mechanized equipment, and the host of highly technical weapons and devices developed by science increases the need for specialists, supply troops, and unbreakable supply lines.

"7. Unification of the Armed Forces—There can be no realistic planning or preparation for the kind of defensive and offensive strategy required for modern war without unity of command.

"8. Universal Training—For reasons discussed at length in our report, we unanimously recommend the adoption of universal training. We do not believe there is any other way of guaranteeing that the armed forces will be able to count on a sufficiently speedy flow of trained men to win a war if large-scale fighting for bases or invasion of the enemy homeland are required. These pretrained young men would be ready to cope with the unprecedented problems of internal security that atomic warfare would bring—problems of such magnitude that our failure to meet them at once, wherever they developed, might lose us the war overnight."

Hess' Wife, 3 Others Arrested for Trial

Frankfurt, Germany, June 1 (U.P.). The German Dena News Agency reported today that the Bavarian Denazification Minister had ordered the arrest of the wives of Rudolf Hess, Baldur von Schirach, the late Fritz Sauckel and the late Alfred Jodl.

American Policy in Europe Dealt Blow by Hungary Coup

card to play. The credits recently approved by the Export-Import Bank can be suspended, but they are comparatively small.

The relief bill just signed by President Truman includes Hungary among the recipients, but the bill contains safeguards so that the new Hungarian regime cannot use the money for political purposes. Political nonrecognition has proved to be a self-defeating form of retaliation in the case of other eastern European satellites whose governments the United States disapproved.

An appeal to the Security Council of the United Nations could be checkmated by the Soviet veto; and as for the Assembly, where no veto applies, the next session is still almost four months in the future.

Economic Aims Unaffected

One thing the Hungarian overturn will not do. It will not deflect American policy-makers from the constructive work of trying to get western Germany back on its feet, to strengthen the economics of France and Italy, to find some way of meeting the impending dollar crisis in Great Britain, and to rebuild economic relationships that were warped and broken throughout Europe in the war.

Secretary Marshall is not yet ready to say how these jobs are to be done. He is waiting for the results of a world-wide survey now being made by a policy-planning group at the State Department under the chairmanship of George Kennan, a foreign service officer of high attainments and long experience in the Soviet Union.

This study of Kennan's group represents a new and broader American approach to the problem of pesce in Europe. It marks a major step forward from the conception that Europe can be strengthened piecemeal, by helping threatened nations one by one.

It presupposes the need of building up every part of Europe within America's reach. It recognizes that the problem of Europe's economic and political survival is vastly greater and more complex than it looked a year ago.

"Invisible Damage"

American policymakers now realize that they overlooked what is coming to be called the "invisible damage" of the war in Europe. They estimated only the tangible damage: the wrecked railroads, the littered harbors, the depleted merchant fleets and all the other visible signs of war's destruction.

Their calculations overlooked the intangible disruption of Europe's prewar trading and financial mechanisms, first by the Nazis and then by the postwar process of nationalizing industries in many countries.

The normal channels of trading between city and countryside, between bank and client, between supplier-nations and consumer-nations, have been shifted or blocked, with the result that the whole intricate nerve-system of European business needs to be rebuilt.

Even if all the railroads of Europe were back in shape, if all the wrecked harbors were dredged, if all the prewar merchant fleets could somehow be brought up from the bottom of the sea, if all the mixed-up populations could somehow be brought back where they belonged—even then, official Washington now realizes, Europe could not function on a paying basis.

Marshall Not Committed

Many ideas have been advanced for putting Europe on a paying basis, but Secretary Marshall has been careful not to commit himself to any of them.

He has not yet followed up Undersecretary Dean Acheson's recent appeal for an enormous increase of American imports to accompany an enormous outlay of dollars for Europe.

He has not yet commented on former Gov. Harold E. Stassen's scheme of devoting 10 per cent of America's national income to European revival.

He has not yet given the slightest public encouragement to the idea, now being urged upon him from inside and outside the Government, that the United States should make dollars available to an economic union in western Europe rather than to individual countries.

The Secretary may outline some such program in a major speech during the coming month, but he is waiting for his policy planners to complete their survey before he makes up his mind.

One perplexity nobody has yet cleared up is how to win support for a vastly greater European reconstruction program from Congress and the American people.

The Greek-Turkish program was "sold" to Congress and the country primarily as an anti-Soviet and anti-Communist move. A comprehensive program of European economic reconstruction could not be presented truthfully in such a light—not, that is, without distorting its meaning and complicating future relatoinships with the Soviet Union.

What is happening in western and southern Europe, as some American policy-makers see it, is not an advance of communism but rather a disintegration of all the economic apparatus of European life. If the process goes much further, there may be a total collapse of the normal trade relationships on which the United States as well as Europe depends for its future prosperity.

New Totalitarianism Possible

It is true that Communist parties in western Europe would take advantage of any such breakdown; to this extent the economic recovery of Europe is a protection against the advance of communism. But some other form of totalitarian rule might also jump in this time to inherit chaos in western Europe, just as hitherto unknown creeds of Italian fascism and German nazism exploited the misery that followed the first World War.

Whatever it is, it will not be friendly to the United States or good for long-term American political or economic interests. This is the difficult conception which Secretary Marshall probably will have to "sell" to an economy-minded Congress on the eve of a presidential election year.

The past few days' events in Hungary will tend to keep congressional eyes focused on the Communist issue, whereas the State Department now sees the European economic problem in a far wider context.

Another difficulty, meantime, is the apparent reluctance of European countries, notably Britain, to take any lead toward meeting the impending dollar crisis. A British spokesman in London said last week it was up to the United States to find a way of making dollars available to Europe.

In official circles here, however, there is a conviction that Europe must make the first move, perhaps in the form of some positive approach toward wider economic union in western Europe. So far only the Belgians and Dutch have moved in this direction with their customs union, a step that has been applauded here.

Look to Monnet

In these circumstances some officials here are looking to Jean Monnet, the architect of the French reconstruction plan, who is expected in Washington within a few weeks.

He, at least, has shown the American Government in the past that he has the requisite "lucidity and daring" (in former Paul Reynaud's phrase) to grasp the problem. It may be that informal talks between Monnet and Administration leaders here will lead to a European initiative—the only basis upon which the United States can act.

AMG Teams Shape Character of Japan

Years of Work Lie Ahead in Selling Democratic Way to 78 Million Citizens

This is the second of a series of articles reviewing the occupation of Japan since the end of the war in the Pacific.

By A. T. Steele

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Tokyo, June 1.—To check on the effectiveness of our reform program in Japan it is necessary to go to the grassroots of the Japanese population. There, in each of Japan's 46 prefectures, you will find the military government teams—small bands of Americans whose job is to supervise the carrying out of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's directives among the broad masses of the Japanese population.

These Americans are in closer touch, with the people of Japan than any other agency of the occupation. Their heartbreaks and successes reflect the mammoth problems we are up against in selling the democratic way of life to Japan's 78 million citizens.

In a recent tour of southern Japan the writer visited military government teams in a number of towns and cities. The first thing that strikes you is how few are the men as compared with the scope of their jobs. The military government has a total strength of only 2500 Americans, or about one to every 31,000 Japanese. It is typical to find 35 to 40 Americans struggling with the problems of a provincial population of two million people—a population foreign to them in language customs and outlook. Their mission is not direct government, but rather surveillance and supervision. It simmers down to a continuous process of guiding, pushing, nudging needling and cajoling low-level Japanese authorities in the implementation of high-level policies.

Average Americans

For the most part these teams are made up of average Americans from middle-class families, led by team commanders whose highest rank is colonel. Some are civilian or military specialists in their respective fields; the majority are Army officers and enlisted men with little or no previous experience in governmental problems. Few of them have more than the most superficial knowledge of the Japanese language. They are weighted down with paper work and hampered by a tortuous chain of command that makes the Olympian policy-making heights of GHQ, Tokyo, seem a million miles away.

To expect miracles of accomplishment within thesek limitations is of course fantastic. Considering their handicaps of background and numbers, many of the teams are doing a creditable job. But real thoroughness would be impossible even if every man were a dynamo of energy and zeal.

Since military government's mission is to supervise and not to command, it must rely heavily on the integrity, efficiency and democratic enthusiasm of prefectural authorities—qualities which are more often missing than not.

Military government is finding it extremely difficult to break through the bureaucratic inertia of the lower levels of the Japanese government. Compliance is in forms rather than in spirit. It is hardly surprising to find that among the rank and file of the population, with some exceptions, the old pattern of semifeudal thinking is still dominant.

In the main, military government people are pretty realistic on the difficulties that face them. All talk of democratization as a very long-range job and most see little prospect for its satisfactory realization unless something like this military government is continued at prefectural as well as national levels for a period of years.

Prodding Is Needed

They point out that without continuous prodding, prefectural and township officials will quickly lose interest and the people will lapse into their old habits of thought thus becoming easy dupes for any party in power. Nearly all are agreed that the major hope is in the schools. Some feel that controls should continue for 20 years at least; others think it will take up to 50 years to complete the job.

Among Japan's back-country folk, I found only the haziest notions of what democracy is all about, but a considerable interest in specific reforms affecting their personal livelihood. In the hallways of military government buildings it was usual to see lines of patiently waiting Japanese, each with a problem to dump into the lap of the officer concerned.

In military government the team commander enjoys a prestige among the Japanese far out of proportion to his rank. As the local spokesman for occupation policy he is the big frog in the prefectual puddle. It is his privilege to summon the prefectural governor and give him a fatherly lecture on the shortcomings of his administration. While he has no authority to issue orders to the Japanese, except in emergencies, his "suggestions" carry just about as much weight as if they were commands. Japanese officials know that if they get out of line with military government they will be reported to Tokyo and that in due course the axe may fall.

Turnover of Personnel

One of the hamstringing defects of military government has been the too rapid turnover of personnel. It takes at least six months for a new man to learn the ropes and to establish firm contacts in his particular field. If he goes home or is transferred within a year, as is often the case, another six months is lost breaking in a successor. This is as confusing to the Japanese as it is to the workings of military government. The cumulative waste of efficiency is enormous. Last year, for instance, the redeployment turnover in military government was around 90 per cent. Fortunatly, this situation is improving with the arrival of increasing numbers of civilian Americans under two-year civil service contracts. Military men still outnumber the civilians two to one, although many are reserve officers with specialized civilian background.

"Channels" Bottleneck

I think the most frequent complaint I heard from military government people was over the long chain of "channels" that separates them from General MacArthur's headquarters in Tokyo. This often means long and unnecessary delays in getting action at the top and breeds a sense of frustration among the men at the bottom.

It is encouraging to find military government teams beseiged with requests for lectures and guidance on the practical application of democratic principles to all phases of Japanese life. This eagerness and responsiveness from a part of the population has infected many of the young military government workers and some of the older ones with a missionary zeal that is refreshing to see.

Strike at Auto Body Works Is Authorized

Detroit, June 1 (U.P.).—The CIO Auto Workers Union announced tonight that its 30,000 members at Briggs Manufacturing Co., world's largest auto body maker, had authorized UAW leaders to call a strike at any time to back contract demands.

The Briggs vote was the latest development in a spring surge of labor unrest in the auto industry which has idled 3800 foremen at Ford Motor Co. and brought a strike threat against Murray Corporation of America, a key Ford supplier.

Briggs workers at two mass meetings overwhelmingly approved motions to place strike power in the hands of their negotiating committee, as UAW workers did last Thursday at the Briggs plant in Evansville, Ind. A 30-day strike notice against Briggs expires Thursday.

Negotiations with Briggs will be resumed tomorrow morning, the UAW said, adding that "if we don't get somewhere soon, we'll walk out."

Ford Foremen to Stay Out

The striking Ford foremen, at an earlier meeting today, voted by a large majority to continue their 12-day-old walkout.

The Ford chapter of the Foremen's Association of America rejected a proposal made by Ford in response to a peace bid from FAA leaders. The company said it was ready to resume negotiations on a new contract as soon as the men returned to work. The FAA-Ford contract was canceled by both sides last May 9.

Ford began to recall Mercury workers, idled by a three-day wildcat walkout of 6000 UAW members at Murray Corp., which supplies body frames and parts for Mercurys. Ford officials said the foremen's walkout had not affected production.

UAW officials said wage and contract talks with Briggs, which started May 1, had produced tentative agreement on the 15-cent pay-raise formula which labor has accepted in mass production industries to meet 1947 wage demands.

The union broke off negotiations last Tuesday, charging Briggs with bad faith and leaving the issues of retroactivity, maintenance of membership, overtime and grievance procedure still unsettled.

Major Parties Map '48 Battle For 96 'See-Saw' House Seats

By Douglas B. Cornell

Associated Press Staff Writer

Democratic and Republican managers of the 1948 scrap for control of the House disclosed plans yesterday to concentrate on 96 "see-saw" congressional districts.

These represent seats the present occupants captured by a margin of 5 per cent or less of the vote in 1946.

Sixty now are Republican and 36 Democratic. Even though factors in congressional elections often are different from those in presidential election years, many of these districts will be strategic battlegrounds during the 1948 campaign.

Representative Leonard Hall (R., N. Y.), who has been chairman of the National Republican Congressional Committee only a month, still is feeling his way around in the job and does not want to make any predictions on 1946 results.

Democrat Confident Now

Neither does Representative Drewry (D., Va.), who has been running the Democratic Congressional Committee 12 years.

"If we were voting next week," Drewry told a reporter, "I'd say we'd win the House. But we don't vote for nearly a year and a half. Nobody knows what might happen before then."

Republicans now have a 242-to-187 edge on Democrats in the House. There is one American-Laborite member who usually votes with the Democrats. There are five vacant seats, three of them last occupied by Republicans and two by Democrats.

Ignoring the vacancies, the GOP could lose 24 of its present membership and still have a majority of 218 in the 435-member House.

The Democrats would have to keep their present strength, including the 36 marginal districts, and knock Republicans out of 31 more to gain 218.

Special elections coming up in some of the vacant districts may change the picture slightly.

The first, next Saturday, will fill the seat of the late Fred Norman, a Republican, in the Third Washington District. In the past the district has changed party hands frequently. Norman won in 1948 with about 54 per cent of the total vote. The race is between Russell Mack, Republican, a Hoquiam publisher, and Charles Savage of Shelton, Democrat, who has represented it before.

Hall says: "It looks close."

Drewry says: "I thaink we'll win. The Democrats outvoted the Republicans about 26,000 to 11,500 in the primary."

Coming up in September is an election in the Eighth Pennsylvania District of the late Charles L. Gerlach, Republican. The rival candidates are Franklin H. Lichtenwalter, Republican, speaker of the State Legislature; and Philip H. Storch of Allentown, Democrat. Republicans have held the district since 1938, Democrats had it for a while before.

Labor and Tax Bills Loaded With Dynamite for Truman

Truman advocated soon after Congress convened in January.

The President will have 10 days—excluding Sundays—to make up his mind on each measure—whether to approve, veto, or permit them to become law without his signature. Top Administration aides already are drafting their recommendations to be placed on his desk shortly after each bill reaches him.

Both bills—one calling for the most sweeping changes in the labor laws in 12 years, the other setting up the first major income tax cut in 16 years—form the foundation of the domestic legislative program on which the GOP rode to a smashing triumph in last November's congressional election. Both are laden with domestic TNT for the elections next year in which the GOP is sure Mr. Truman will try to win his first four-year White House term.

If he vetoed the tax plan, he would be unpopular with thousands upon thousands of workers and businessmen who would reap a big share of the benefits through reductions in withholding taxes a month from now. Martin was quick to call attention to this in his appeal to Mr. Truman to sign it.

If he approved it, he would be backing down abruptly from his previous firm stand against any cuts this year.

President on Spot

"The tax reductions will increase the purchasing power of the worker in factory, on farm and in office," Martin said, "by increasing his 'take-home' pay. They will enable the businessman, small and large, to expand his business and produce more vigorously."

If the President yields to some of his advisers' suggestions and accepts the labor bill, he will be abandoning finally and flatly the pro-labor policy he inherited from the Roosevelt New Deal. And it may cost him the labor vote. If he vetoed it and the country bogged down once more in a sea of labor-management disputes, the Republicans might gain a potent talking point for next year's campaign.

Chairman Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) of the Senate GOP Committee joined Martin in hoping that Mr. Truman would not wield his veto power on taxes. Taft told reporters that refusal to sign the bill "won't make sense" and would be a sign of "pure stubbornness."

Taft agreed with Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.), veteran Democratic authority on fiscal legislation, that a veto would kill all chances of tax reductions this year. He said it would be "silly" for Congress to try and pass another bill, containing lesser reductions, before July 28—latest target date for adjournment.

"The people who have been wanting a 20 per cent cut are not going to be satisfied with a five per cent cut," Taft said. "They would rather wait until next year."

Capper and Tydings Speak

Senator Arthur Capper (R., Kans.) followed up the "stubborn yeto" theme in a radio address to his farm constituents in which he termed the labor measure "a very fair bill" and said tax reduction could go hand in hand with cuts in Federal spending so that they "will just about cancel each other out."

Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) in a radio talk accused the GOP of trying to "gamble with the soundness of Federal finance."

Tydings said he could not vote for the tax bill "before the cuts in Federal expenditures justify it, and to leave the Government open to the gamble of prolonging the wicked policy of running our national establishment on borrowed money year after year, and thereby increasing more and more the gigantic governmental debt already resting on the shoulders of the people."

Army, Navy, Air Forces Schedule Joint Maneuvers

By the United Press

American GIs will scramble ashore from amphibious boats on the Gulf Coast of Texas next November in the second postwar Army-Navy-Air Forces combined maneuvers since World War II.

The landings will take place near Galveston, Tex., and will be used to teach the postwar soldier new techniques of loading and landing armed forces and equipment, the Army announced yesterday.

The combat command "A" men of the Second Armored Division, Camp Hood, Tex., will be the principal group engaged and National Guard and organized reserve units will take part.

The Navy amphibious training command, Little Creek, Va., will train the ground troops in embarkations and debarkation.

Reich to Get 50 U. S. Ships

difficultues have been hurdled, President Truman will send Congress a message on the subject.

There also is opposition to Mr. Hoover's proposal that the Scandinavian countries turn over large supplies of fish to the Germans on the promise of future payment in German goods. And from Norway, Sweden and Denmark there are objections to the former President's suggestion that Germany be provided with boats to reestablish her Baltic and North Sea fishing fleets.

Mr. Truman is said to believe that these measures, plus an increase in German manufacturing for export, may save up to 150, million dollars in the joint British-American occupation zones in 1947-48.

Tractor Builder Gets Death Threat

Peoria, Ill., June 1 (AP).—A continuous police guard was stationed at the home of Louis B. Neumiller, president of the Caterpillar Tractor Co., today following a telephoned threat against his life.

Peoria County Sheriff Earl Spainhower said the threat was received last night in the absence of Neumiller by his daughter, Martha, 15. The girl related a man left this message:

"Tell your father he and his kind are not fit to live. We will be out there at midnight. He'll get the same thing McNear got."

George P. McNear, president of the Toledo, Peoria and Western Railroad, was shot to death near his Peoria home March 10.

3 Crewmen Killed In B-29 Alaska Crash

Anchorage, Alaska, June 1 (AP).—Three of 12 crewmen were killed when a B-29 Superfortress of the Forty-sixth Reconnaissance Squadron crashed and burned near Fairbanks Thursday, the Alaskan Air Command announced today.

Previously, the trio had been listed as missing. The other nine men escaped serious injury.

Taft Backs Early Approval Of Peace Treaties by Senate

By Jack Bell

Associated Press Staff Writer

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) threw his weight yesterday behind a drive by Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) for early Senate ratification of peace treaties with Italy, Bulgaria, Romania and Hungary.

Taft, who heads the Senate Republican Policy Committee, told a reporter he is going along with Vandenberg in the effort to obtain approval of the four treaties, possibly this week, because he believes "the balance is in favor" of the agreements.

But the Ohio Senator made it plain he has given much thought to the contention of some opponents of the Italian treaty that its ratification—bringing about the subsequent withdrawal of American troops from that country—might open the way for seizure of the Italian government by the Communists.

"I don't know and I don't think anyone now can guess what happens if we withdraw our troops," Taft said. "Perhaps the Communists will seize control of the Italian government. If they do, where does that leave us, with our program of aiding Greece and Turkey to prevent them from falling into the hands of the Communists?

"That certainly poses the $64 question. But I believe the balance is in favor of ratifying the treaty because I think it is the best we can get at this time and possibly the only treaty we'll ever get to which Russia will agree."

Hungary Asks Peaceful Cooperation With All

Budapest, June 1 (U.P.).—Janoes Dinnyes, Hungary's new Premier, said today in his first speech since taking office that "We want peaceful cooperation with all great powers—the United States and Britain, and especially with our great neighbor, the Soviet Union.

He spoke after a morning military parade.

Dinnyes, former nonparty Defense Minister, was sworn in yesterday to replace Ferenc Nagy, who resigned Friday from his refuge in Switzerland. Nagy had been accused with former Foreign Minister Janos Gyoengyoesi and other officials of being implicated in a plot to overthrow Hungary's "democratic" government.

[Radio Moscow said today the governmental crisis in Hungary was caused by conspiracy of officials in the Freeholders Party to overthrow the coalition government and restore a "reactionary Fascist regime" by force when the peace treaty is signed and Russian troops withdraw from Hungary.]

A high Foreign Office official, it was learned, left yesterday for Switzerland to take Nagy his 4½-yead-old son, Laczi. All of Nagy's immediate family was now out of Hungary. He and his second wife are in Switzerland, along with Nagy's daughter by his first wife. Another son, Ferenc, jr., is with the Hungarian diplomatic service in Washington.

(Henry Higes, concilor of the Hungarian Legation in Bern denied Nagy was getting his son because of a deal with the new Hungarian government under which he agreed not to talk about developments. He denied all purported Nagy interviews with correspondents in Switzerland.

Silenced by Threat

[Nagy's friends said that the Communist were holding a threat of treason charges over his head to prevent him from talking about the weekend coup, the Associated Press said.

[The informants said that Nagy would be tried in absentia if he broke a reported agreement not to discuss the matter with western powers.

[All Budapest Sunday newspapers printed what they said were excerpts from depositions, obtained by Russan forces, which implicated the former Premier in a recent plot to overthrow the government.

[H. F. Arthur Schoenfeld, United States Minister to Hungary, left here by plane today with his family to report to Washington and retire. He will be succeeded by Selden Chapin, who is expected to arrive in Budapest, June 20.]

War Ravages Being Effaced By Ryukyuans

Tokyo, June 1 (U.P.).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported to the War Department tonight that, during January and February, the people of the Ryukyu Islands off the southern tip of Japan made great strides toward rebuilding their war-torn industrial and political economy.

He said that, under the guidance of United States authorities, Ryukyuan natives are continuing to reclaim their damaged lands, to learn modern agricultural methods, and to knit their far-flung islands into a more solidified political entity.

But he said, food is still a problem.

The Ryukyus cover hundreds of miles and a myriad of islands including Okinawa.

The general said that, although there were several discussions toward the consolidation of the islands under a single Ryukyuan authority, there are still several points of controversy among native political leaders.

He said Allied authorities had decided to postpone democratic elections in the islands "pending completion of repatriation and further resettlement."

New Jap Premier To Draw a Line 'Vis-a-Vis' Reds

Tokyo, June 1 (AP).—A statement issued by the Japanese foreign office over the name of Premier Tetsu Katayama said the new government intended to "demarcate a clear line vis-a-vis communism" and expressed "fervent hope that democratic people throughout the world will give their unbounded assistance to the people of the new Japan."

The Premier's secretary said the statement was issued only for "the overseas press." Japanese news agencies and papers failed to receive it.

In a subsequent conference with Japanese reporters, Katayama mentioned none of the points in the statement, but said he would strive for a government "without any front or back"—a literal translation corresponding to "without two faces."

Holiday Fatalities Exceed 400 With More Expected

Chicago, June 1 (U.P.).—Violent deaths during the Memorial Day weekend soared past the 400 mark today, with five airplane crashes accounting for one fourth of them.

The total number killed was 410. It was expected to increase to at least 450.

Highway accidents accounted for 159 deaths. Plane crashes killed 101 persons. Forty-seven persons drowned and 103 others died in miscellaneous accidents.

The traffic deaths were the highest for a Memorial Day weekend since prewar days.

Son of Hungarian Ex-Premier Is Attache of Legation Here

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

Ferenc Nagy, jr., 22, son of the recently resigned Prime Minister of Hungary, has had his political troubles, too.

Nagy

An attache of the Hungarian Legation here, the youth said yesterday he had been editor of the "most often banned newspaper" in Hungary, a weekly in which he attacked communism.

The man who suspended the paper almost every month was the Communist Minister of the Interior in his father's cabinet, but that did not give young Nagy any protection.

Nagy would not comment on the present situation in Hungary. He said the Legation has received no official information that his father has resigned. Associated Press dispatches, have reported the Prime Minister was replaced by a pro-Communist while on a vacation in Switzerland, from where he telephoned his resignation.

A likeable and friendly person who smiles easily and speaks English with very little difficulty, Nagy did not mind telling of his bouts with the minister who suspended the weekly for an average of two weeks about every month in the 1½ years of his editorship.

Nagy, whose mother and sister, Julia, 21, are with the former Prime Minister in Switzerland, has a 4-year-old brother, Laci, who was left in Hungary when the father took his vacation. This was the first leave his father had taken in the 16 months he has been in office. The family name is pronounced as though it were spelled "Nodj," he said.

The attache came to this country first in July, 1946, as secretary to a delegation headed by his father and including the Deputy Prime Minister, Matyas Rakosi, a Communist; Foreign Minister Janos Gyoengyoesy, a Smallholder, and Minister of Justice Istvan Riesz, a Social Democrat. He returned with the official mission, but came back to Washington as an attache last January. He lives at the Hotel 2400.

Creedon Sees Million Homes Finished in '47—If Curbs Stay

Housing Expediter Frank R. Creedon said yesterday that 1,038,000 dwellings can be completed in 1947, including 760,000 permanent homes, if Federal controls are kept "for a few more months."

The statement was Creedon's first estimate on this year's housing efforts. However, it contained no forecast of the number of new homes to be started. So far, starts have lagged behind 1946, while completions have run ahead.

Creedon said 610,000 new permanent homes had been completed this year or were under construction and would be finished. Another 150,000 can be started and made ready for occupancy this year, he added, and nonpermanent dwellings will add 278,000 to the total.

Meanwhile, the National Home and Property Owners Foundation attacked the "guaranteed markets" plan by which the Government agrees to purchase all unsold prefabricated units at 90 per cent of the market price.

"Unsold prefabricated houses are piling up in warehouses," Joseph H. Deckman, the foundation's housing chairman, declared in a statement.

"The market guarantee plan is being turned into a WPA for prefab manufacturers who can no longer sell their products in view of the increasing buyer resistance to the high prices and low quality of factory-built homes."

The Creedon statement came as the Senate prepared to windup today its job of overhauling Federal rent controls, which it began last week by setting up machinery for "voluntary" agreements between landlords and tenants to hike rents 15 per cent.

A vote on the completed bill is expected either tomorrow or Tuesday. Democrats, who said they would make a last ditch fight to continue rent controls without substantial change, admited privately that their efforts would be futile.

Slow Buying Hits Clothing Factories

By The Associated Press

Manufacturers of clothing and textile products are feeling the effects of reduced retail buying springing from consumer resistance to price rises, the Commerce Department said yesterday.

Retailers' shelves are better stocked and manufacturers are cutting down their operations in some branches of the industry, notably soft woolen goods and women's apparel, a Department analysis said.

On the other hand, it said, output of some items of men's clothing and of women's house dresses is still relatively low and short of demand at current prices.

Total consumption of cotton, wool and rayon last year was more than two fifths larger than in 1939. The textile industry operated at peak peacetime levels throughout 1946 and the early part of 1947. Consumption of cotton alone was one third larger in 1946 than in 1939.

The department said the gross margin between the price of a pound of raw cotton and the price of unfinished cloth had steadily widened as a result of the shortage of "gray goods" (unfinished fabrics).

It gave this account of the rise in mill margins: From 1925 to 1939, they ranged from about 10 to 15 cents; in 1939 they averaged 11.7 cents; after a slow rise in 1940, they jumped to around 20 cents in 1941, remaining at that level until the spring of 1946.

By last October, the peak of the bull market in raw cotton, average mill margins had increased to 31 cents and then, as the price of raw cotton declined and price ceilings were lifted, they jumped nearly 50 cents in December and have remained above that level the first four months of 1947.

The department's figures are based upon quotations for spot and nearby prices, and do not cover contract prices for distant deliveries, which have shown less rise.

OWLS BITE THE DUST—Five small owls in the 700 block of Pershing dr., Silver Spring, have had women and children of the neighborhood in a dither recently, swooping and striking at the unwary. Yesterday, Capt. Joseph B. Nolte and Sergt. Melvin Wheeler of Montgomery police took an air pistol, bagged the birds which held the angry-looking swarm. The bees were hanging in a solid mass shaped like a bag.

Roberts then took a hive box out of his car and placed it on the sidewalk. Borrowing a penknife, the expert neatly sliced off the branch with the insects still clinging to it, placed it in his hive box, and posed for pictures.

No one got stung. Roberts got about 10,000 bees, about $5 worth, including the queen who started it all.

The bee man said such swarms are caused by overcrowding of a hive—a familiar reason for moving with any species—and the fact that there's no such thing as more than one queen bee in a hive. The queens either kill each other off, or fly away and take their own swarms with them.

When he isn't home with his honey, Roberts is assistant superintendent of registry at the main Post Office.

FLOYD ROBERTS, bee expert, of 920 South Taylor st., Arlington, was called in when bees swarmed in the 1900 block of E st. nw. yesterday. He got this cluster into a hive, and everyone breathed easier

Senate Airs Today U. S.-British Oil Pact Assailed as 'Freezeout' by Small Producers

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee begins hearings today on the controversial Anglo-American petroleum agreement which opponents contend will lead to creation of an international oil cartel.

Retiring Undersecretary of State Dean Acheson heads a list of State and Interior Department witnesses and oil men have been summoned to testify about the agreement signed by Britain and the United States at London in 1945.

The pact provides for mutual respect of oil concession contracts and equality of opportunity for petroleum exploration and refinery operations between the two nations.

It also would set up an international petroleum commission of three members from each country to aid in the development of oil resources and techniques, and to study demands.

It specifies that, as soon as practicable, the two governments will propose to all interested oil producer and consumer nations the negotiation of an international petroleum agreement establishing a permanent international petroleum council.

On the eve of the hearings, opponents charged that the agreement would freeze out the small oil companies and further entrench the big operators.

J. E. McDonald, Texas commissioner of agriculture, who will testify today, said in a statement that the U. S. importation of its petroleum "across seas and deserts will destroy incentive to make domestic explorations commensurate with wartime demands."

"Every farm from Maine to Mexico, from Washington to Key West, is a potential oil producer—until exploration and drillings to a minimum depth of 15,000 feet or more will have proven them barren of oil and oil shale," he said.

In a brief prepared at the request of committee chairman Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), Senator E. H. Moore, (R., Okla.), himself an independent oil man, listed these objections by the opponents:

1. It will lead to creation of a world cartel with respect to the international oil trade.

2. It will require Congress to enact implementing legislation for regulation and control over the domestic industry.

3. It is the basis for the executive department to take certain regulatory actions deemed consistent with the purpose of the treaty.

Moore said he couldn't go along completely with these objections. He said the language of the agreement was clearly against cartels, and that the treaty specifically prohibited regulation of the domestic oil industry.

Partisans Reported Taking to Italy Hills

Rome, June 1 (U.P.). — Premier Alcide de Gasperi formally swore in his new Rightist government today amid unconfirmed reports that thousands of former Partisans were streaming back to the mountains in protest against leaving Leftists out of the cabinet.

The new government of 11 Christian Democrats and five Independents took the oath before President Enrico de Nicola. The cabinet will hold its first meeting Tuesday.

Dispatches to Independent and Rightist newspapers from the mountainous North Italy region between Milan and Turin said that as many as 80,000 former Partisans took to their mountain hideouts yesterday.

Rome Is Skeptical

The ministry of interior in Rome viewed these accounts with reserve, saying that no reports had yet been received and that "it is too early to tell if the Partisan movement is serious.

The Partisan exodus was reported taking place within the industrial triangle described by Milan, Turin and Genoa, a stronghold of the Communist and Socialist Parties.

Police headquarters at Milan confirmed the movement of "one group of at least 1000 men" to the mountains near Stresa.

[The Rome press speculated today about the possibility of American aid to Italy under the Truman Doctrine, the Associated Press said.

[Much of the speculation was pegged on a meeting at Livorno tomorrow of high-ranking American Army officers, but Army public relations officers denied the session was "within the scope" of the Truman Doctrine.

To Study GI Departure

[An official Army announcement said that the meeting, which will bring together general officers of the United States European and Mediterranean theaters, was called to "arrange for the removal from Italy of American troops and equipment after the Italian treaty has been signed."

[The treaty provides for withdrawal of occupation troops within 90 days of ratification. There are approximately 20,000 American soldiers in this country, the Army said.

[Among those attending the conference will be Lieut. Gen. Clarence Huebner, the United States deputy commander in Germany, and Lieut. Gen. Geoffrey Keyes, the United States commander in Austria.

[Newspapers said many factors indicated that American troops were preparing for a long stay in Italy. They said a school for the children of American military personnel would be reopened at Livorno, and that new requisitions had been made for military rest camps along the Livorno coast.]

War Between U. S., Russia Improbable, Gandhi Believes

By Gerald Rock
Copyright by the United Press

Bombay, India, June 1.—Mohandas K. Gandhi, the spiritual leader of India's Hindus, said today in a telegraphic interview that he regards war between the United States and Russia as "highly improbable."

Gandhi

He said the only condition upon which the world can live is united under one central governing body composed of representatives of the component parts. He declined to say, however, whether he thought such a world union would ever become a reality.

The United Press submitted to him six questions from Bombay. Gandhi telegraphed his answers as follows:

Q. Do you think there is any possibility of armed conflict between Russia and the United States?

A. Anything is possible but it is highly improbable.

Q. Do you foresee possibility of the world being united under one central governing body composed of representatives of the component parts?

A. That is the only condition on which the world can live.

Q. Do you feel that India will ultimately be united under a central government regardless of what the immediate settlement may be?

A. The future will depend on what we do in the present.

Q. What do you feel is the most acceptable solution to the Palestine problem?

A. Abandonment wholly by Jews of terrorism and other forms of violence.

Q. Do you believe that Egypt and the Sudan should unite under one government when the British leave?

A. I have no doubt that they ought to.

Q. As the result of your experiment during the past five months do you feel that the principle of nonviolence can yet be triumphant in the solution of the world's problems?

A. My five months in Noakhali (East Bengal district) have only confirmed my previous experience that nonviolence can solve all our ills.

India to Get Dominion Rule In 3 Months, New Delhi Hears

New Delhi, India, June 1 (U.P.).—Reliable political sources said tonight that Britain would transfer power to a dominion government or governments in India within three months.

This report came on the eve of Viceroy Viscount Mountbatten's crucial conference tomorrow with Hindu, Moslem and Sikh leaders to whom he will present his plan of procedure for British withdrawal from India. Britain has promised to withdraw by June, 1948.

Mountbatten was understood to have suggested originally to the British cabinet that Britain immediately recognize the Indian interim government as a dominion government.

The cabinet was said to have balked, but finally decided to recall all British provincial governments before the end of August.

The cabinet, it was reported, soon will introduce legislation in Commons to put the following program of withdrawal into effect:

1. Give the interim cabinet or cabinets dominion powers.
2. Recall British provincial governments.
3. Permit Mountbatten to remain a link between the Hindustan (Hindu) and Pakistan (Moslem) central governments until final treaties or transfer of power from the British to Hindustan and Pakistan are signed.

Such legislation would recognize the Moslem demand for a separate state (Pakistan).

Viscount and Lady Mountbatten went to the Gurgaon district 30 miles south of New Delhi today to see five villages that have been pillaged and burned by rioting Moslems and Hindus in the last week. A total of 35 villages have been burned.

A telephone message from Lahore said the city of Amritsar was in flames after widespread arson there.

Hoover 'Trial Balloon' Gets Pravda Once-Over

Moscow, June 1 (AP).—Pravda described as a "trial balloon' today the suggestion of Herbert Hoover that the United States consider negotiation of peace treaties with Japan and Germany without the Soviet Union.

The Communist newspaper said the suggestion was offered "to test the nerves' 'of other peoples, and was "doomed to failure." Any such peace, Pravda added, would be "a doubtful peace. His Majesty, the dollar, would dominate and rule."

Mr. Lewis' Demands

No wonder negotiations between the United Mine Workers and the Northern and Western soft coal operators have broken down. For John L. Lewis' wage demands alone would, according to management estimates, add about 70 cents a ton to the price of coal. If all other demands were granted, the cost of producing a ton of coal would be increased by almost a dollar. Such increases in coal prices would not only accelerate the trend toward use of substitute fuels; they would also mean a departure from the 15 cents per hour wage increase formula that workers in other basic industries have agreed to accept and that the coal mine operators are willing to grant the UMW.

Acceptance of the Lewis demands would be much too high a price to pay in order to avert the threat of a coal strike when the mines are returned to their owners on July 1. For the resultant increases in coal prices would add to the costs of producing steel and other basic commodities and those increases in turn would tend to raise prices of countless manufactures. It is also highly probable that acceptance of the Lewis wage demands would initiate a fresh round of wage demands from other unions and dash nascent hopes of putting an end to the spiraling rise of living costs that is both cause and consequence of demands for higher wages. Neither the Nation nor the bituminous coal industry can afford to risk such developments. Still less can we afford to permit a ruthless labor leader to gain his ends simply because he has the power to paralyze the industrial life of the country.

There has to be a showdown sometime, unless Mr. Lewis is prepared to listen to reason, and it might as well be now. If a wage agreement of an equitable sort cannot be negotiated and the miners stage a walkout, the country will again be faced by the problem of how to avert work stoppages in a basic industry that imperil the national health and safety. Should President Truman sign the labor bill, we shall have an opportunity to test the efficacy of the machinery set up for delaying strike action in such cases. Should that prove ineffective, we believe that public opinion would unreservedly support legislation giving the Government the peacetime seizure powers that would enable it to protect the country from the threat of crippling strikes—a threat that constitutes the chief stock-in-trade of irresponsible leaders of the Lewis type.

Skimping On Education

It was inevitable, we suppose, that economy should be advanced as an argument against the proposals for Federal aid to education. Republican leaders in the House are reported to have issued orders to the Labor Committee to kill the Federal aid bill on which it has been holding public hearings. The report gains credibility, moreover, from Representative Halleck's remark that "Of course, we are not exactly hunting ways to spend more money. And many States have done a lot in the last year for their schools and teachers." Here is the economy plea wrapped up in a specious and misleading suggestion that a Federal aid program is, after all unnecessary.

Let us dispose first of the question of need. It is true that some States have effected some improvement in the last year for their schools and teachers. But this improvement has been altogether inadequate; and it has taken place in those States least in need of assistance from the Nation. Senator Taft's Federal aid bill, and at least one of the bills now before the House Labor Committee, allocates Federal funds in proportion to State needs, so that those States least able to bolster up their educational systems will be granted, as they should be, more generous help from the Federal Government. The aim of the Taft bill is to bring the expenditures for education, State and Federal combined, to a minimum of $40 a year for each pupil in public grammar and secondary schools.

This minimum is itself an unanswerable demonstration of the need for Federal aid. It is a pathetic minimum. It is entirely inadequate for the provision of minimally decent schooling for American youngsters. To acknowledge that there are now States of the Union which cannot provide even this without Federal assistance is to rebut completely the suggestion that the States themselves are now doing enough for their schools and teachers. The facts are, of course, that all over the country the teaching profession is being abandoned by its ablest actual and potential practitioners in favor of more remunerative careers, that in many places classrooms are so overcrowded because of a shortage of teachers and physical facilities as to make good schooling impossible and that, as the widespread teachers' strikes of last winter indicated, public education in the United States is on the verge of a serious breakdown.

These are not facts about which the Nation can afford to remain unconcerned. This is not a situation the perpetuation of which can in any rational sense be termed economy. It cannot be called frugal for a nation, any more than for a family, to skimp on the schooling of its young. Almost any other public service can more sensibly be sacrificed. For in a society founded on the idea of government by the consent of the governed, education is necessarily the well-spring of progress and of the public welfare. The Senate, we hope, will recognize this elementary imperative and move expeditiously toward action on the Federal aid bills before it. If the House thwarts such action, it will be guilty of an exceedingly imprudent sort of economy.

Third-Party Threat

Current talk about a third-party movement in 1948 is in part an outgrowth of Henry Wallace's barnstorming tour of the country. But in part also it appears to be a convenient means of applying pressure to President Truman in an effort to induce him to veto the labor bill. The President is being warned that his signature on this legislation would drive organized labor into the arms of Mr. Wallace and give him a domestic issue on which a third party can be built. The result, it is said, would be to make Mr. Truman's election in 1948 impossible.

No one can reasonably deny that the establishment of a third party behind Mr. Wallace would be a grave threat to President Truman's political future. A party split in 1948 would be virtually certain to produce the same results as it did in 1912 and 1924. In the first instance the schism in the Republican Party made victory for Woodrow Wilson easy, and in the second instance Senator Robert M. La Follette, sr., contributed to a sweeping victory for Calvin Coolidge. Mr. Wallace and his followers are well aware of the fact that, as a third party, they could do nothing more than to enhance the probability of a Republican victory.

No doubt it is true, as Joseph and Stewart Alsop pointed out the other day, that the Communist element in the movement for a third party is aiming at precisely that outcome. They cling to the hope that a change at the White House would hasten the withdrawal of American influence and American strength from Europe. The best strategy to work for such a change is to split the Democratic Party. Mr. Wallace has made himself the spearhead of opposition to the Administration's foreign policy, but will he dare to carry it to the extreme of revolting against his party and underwriting a Republican victory? It is suggested that he expects a Republican victory to result in depression and thus clear the way for him to be elected President in 1952. But much stretching of the imagination is required to suppose that even Mr. Wallace could devise such a fantastic scheme. So popular a figure as Theodore Roosevelt could not reunite his party again when once he had split it into angry factions. Surely Mr. Wallace knows that his one chance of ever winning high office again is to remain within his party. If this elementary political fact is evaluated, the threat of a Wallace ticket in 1948 immediately loses some of its weight.

In any event, we doubt that Mr. Truman will be deeply influenced by this threat. His popularity rose from a critically low point last fall largely because the public came to believe that he has courage enough to act in the public interest regardless of politics or outside pressure. A political maneuver in dealing with the labor bill might easily cost him more in terms of lost public confidence than he could hope to gain by placating labor leaders or appeasing Mr. Wallace and his followers. As we see it, Mr. Truman's honest directness in handling public issues is his greatest asset. We do not think that he can improve his chance of being elected President next year by weakening this characteristic. And it is absolutely certain that he would detract from the quality of his present service to the country by adopting such a course.

Production First

Winthrop Aldrich, chairman of the Board of the Chase National Bank and President of the International Chamber of Commerce, says that "it is imperative not only for us but for the rest of the world that our imports be brought more nearly into balance with our exports so that countries needing our goods can get exchange with which to buy them." The observation is commonplace by dint of long repetition, but it misses the point of the present crisis, and should be revised in line with the present facts of the economic relations of nations.

The Administration's trade policy is, of course, to bring exports and imports into approximate equilibrium by removing barriers to freer trade and agreeing to take payment for goods in goods. However, there is no prospect of achieving this aim for some years to come. It is, in other words, an ideal goal—to be reached only by concentrating on the immediate task of helping to rebuild the shattered economies of war-ravaged countries by supplying them with capital equipment and industrial raw materials. This is the crux of our world problem.

Such pressing needs must be met before the receiving countries will be able to produce exportable surpluses in sufficient quantity to pay for essential imports. To try to close the existing wide gap between our exports and imports by encouraging an over-rapid expansion of exports from countries that are in the throes of postwar reconstruction would be extremely short-sighted. For it would retard their recovery and consequently interfere with our efforts to help them eventually to become self-sustaining.

Through the British loan and advances from the Export-Import Bank and the World Bank the United States is extending financial assistance to hard pressed nations. With such aid the gulf between our exports and our imports can be partly bridged. But if our exports are to be maintained at present high levels—as they must for some time to come in order to speed world recovery—we shall be called upon to supply additional investment capital through public and/or private lending agencies. It had been hoped to supplement this supply of dollars by American tourist outlays, but even this method of taking foreign goods and services at the source is not yet practicable. Countries suffering from food and housing shortages are in no condition to quarter and feed any considerable number of overseas visitors. And they should not be encouraged to do so, as the British at least admit frankly.

The problem that confronts countries in western Europe and elsewhere, it cannot be sufficiently emphasized, is primarily a production problem, not an American import problem, as Mr. Aldrich intimates. Here is the crux of the coming crisis. Already the British and the French are troubled about their inability to meet their foreign obligations out of their own foreign exchange resources, as, indeed, are other countries, even our Canadian neighbor. But the unbalanced state of their international accounts is only symptomatic of the underlying difficulty, which is their present inability to produce enough goods to provide for their own needs and have enough goods and services left for export to cover their import requirements. Their inadequate productive capacity would be further weakened by a policy of calling for a quick balancing of exports and imports.

This is the nature of the problem that we are told is now under study in the State Department. It will be a race against time. Collapsing economies and import restrictions may beat the men who are now studying a scheme of over-all reconstruction, let alone action by Congress. We can only hope that deterioration will be arrested till a scheme is set on foot.

Next In Line

Among the five bills put on the Senate Republican Policy Committee's must list for action is the proposal to dispel the present uncertainty as to succession to the Presidency when there is no Vice President. The House adopted a bill for this purpose last year. The Senate failed to act. Now the Senate Committee on Rules and Administration has taken the lead by reporting out a substitute for the bill introduced by Senator Wherry. This follows the lines of the House bill. Such action is surprising because the effect would be to make the Speaker of the House heir apparent to President Truman and then the President pro tempore of the Senate. However, even Speaker Martin is more acceptable to GOP Senators than is the prospect of Secretary Marshall succeeding to the Presidency under the present law.

We quite agree with the committee majority that in any change in the line of succession the Speaker of the House should have precedence over the President pro tempore of the Senate. The bill itself, however, makes it evident why neither is in a good position to serve as heir apparent. The Speaker, for example, would be expected to perform the duties of the President if the latter should be disabled by illness or otherwise, although no means of determining when the President is unable to perform the duties of his office is provided. In order to qualify for this temporary service the Speaker would have to resign as Speaker and as a Representative in Congress. Surely it is asking a good deal of a man who has spent his lifetime climbing to the Speakership to give it all up in order to be acting President for possibly six weeks or even less time.

No provision is made for special elections. In the case of death of the President and Vice President the country might have to get along with a substitute Chief Executive for nearly four years. This seems to us a mistake. Surely arrangements could be made for naming a President at the midterm election in such circumstances. To be sure, the committee would make it virtually certain that no nonelected official would occupy the White House for any length of time; for while Cabinet members are listed in the line of succession following the President pro tempore, any one of them would be bumped as soon as a Speaker or President pro tempore could qualify. But we see no reason why accident should put a Senator or Representative in the White House for three years or more without a confirming vote of the people.

Minority members of the committee make the most telling point against the bill when they condemn it as "piecemeal legislation." It leaves several aspects of the presidential succession problem untouched. Even if this measure should be passed by both houses, therefore, we think that Congress should also approve the concurrent resolution introduced by Senators Green and Smith calling for a thorough study of all the issues relating to the problem, including abolition of the so-called Electoral College. The Senate passed this resolution last year. We doubt that the committee bill can be made at all palatable without some such promise of more comprehensive action after the immediate emergency has been met.

Amphibious Operations

Your editorial of May 28, "Integrating Our Armed Services," in spite of two-bit words like "inchoate," "viability," and "disputatious," was more of a one-sided appeal to mass prejudice than I am accustomed to reading in your usually open-minded paper.

It is easy to watch a newsreel of an amphibious assault and decide in 1947 that any force can organize and make a landing. In 1921 the situation was somewhat different. The tragic lesson of the ill-fated British Gallipoli adventure was still so fresh that an amphibious assault against defended positions was considered to be impossible. In that setting then the Marine Corps in Admiral Zacharias' words "developed this splendid technique, one of the greatest factors in winning the war. This technique was fully employed and made possible the Normandy landings."

The term "technique" refers to the delicate balance of troops, ships, supplies, ammunition, and naval and air support necessary to stay on a hostile beach, as well as the more obvious tactics of when, where, and how to strike. The types of transports and the loading of those transports can spell the difference between success and failure. So can the types of landing craft, methods of unloading supplies, or a hundred other little known factors.

Continued hard work, study and maneuvers by the Marine Corps and the Navy amphibious forces between 1921 and 1941 solved these problems. The answers they got were used in training 40 Army divisions and eight of our allies, after the war was upon us. The Army used these answers because they were the only ones available.

It does not detract one whit from the eternal guts and glory of the soldiers who smashed onto the Normandy beaches that the tools and techniques they used were developed by the Marine Corps or that the scant half million Marines were fairly well occupied at places like Saipan, Peleliu and Iwo Jima. Nor does it add to the stature of the Army or its soldiers to withhold from the Marine Corps credit for a unique and vital contribution to history.

My understanding, based on your news, rather than your editorial columns, is that in the current legislation the Marine Corps seeks only the assurance that it may continue a mission which it has carried out with distinction for nearly two centuries. At no time has the Marine Corps sought to cripple the Army or create for itself a new department under the guise of economy.

Art Vs. Loan

How grateful must be the people of Haiti for the generous gesture of the Department of State in permitting them to view the examples of primitive American art now on display at Port au Prince.

While the people of the republic reflect on our artistic generosity they must be puzzled by our financial acumen. In 1922 Haiti borrowed 22 million dollars. On this debt they have paid back 38 million dollars in remittance of capital and interest, leaving $6,500,000 yet to pay.

Haitians must be puzzled when they consider that although they have never missed a payment; that their bonds sell above par; that their record is better than Finland's, they are the only country in the Western Hemisphere to be denied a loan. After three months in the United States their mission returned empty-handed although they had requested that the money be used at the direction of American officials for "drainage, irrigation and a carefully planned agricultural program so that not one centimeter of soil may remain unproductive in Haiti."

They must have looked with amazement at the example of Colombia, which was granted a loan, although 473 million dollars of their bonds are in default. They observe Mexico securing help, although their railroad bonds have been in default for 32 years. They note the friendly financial aid extended to Chile, which has only met 25 per cent of its obligations, and to Peru which has only recently resumed payment of its 85 million dollars worth of defaulted bonds.

Under the leadership of President Dumarsais Estime, the people of Haiti in their towns and villages are collecting their meager sums to pay off the balance of the American loan. They desire above everything else financial emancipation. The United States cannot gain the good will of such people by exhibiting fantastic pictures while wearing an artist's smock under a Shylock's mask. DAVID WHITNEY.

Housing Picture

I would suggest that Mr. O. J. Dekom (letters published May 21 and May 31) take a long look at the photographs recently submitted in the contest, "Pictures Talk Housing," sponsored by the Citizens Council for Community Planning. These are now on display at the Longfellow Building, Connecticut ave.

In painting his bright housing picture, Mr. Dekom has either ignored or closed his eyes to slum conditions in this city or those of any town in any section of the country. Because they exist is there any reason they have to be?

Mr. Dekom might also read the "Wanted to Rent" column in any of the newspapers. There still seem to be a lot of people clamoring for a place to live—especially a place they can afford.

The fact that we live in the richest country in the world, with better or higher standards of living than our less wealthier neighbors and friends across the seas, is more reason than any other for slum clearance, beautiful towns and cities, low-cost housing for those who cannot pay high prices and rents, all over America.

Let us have more of Herb Block's cartoons—and more housing editorials—perhaps Congress will yet do something, before adjournment, about the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill. MARGARET DENT.

Socialism In Europe

Governor Stassen is to be commended for presenting us with a concrete plan for American assistance in European reconstruction and for the establishment of a permanent foreign trade policy. Many of the points of his proposal are entirely sound, and he is particularly to be congratulated upon having taken into consideration the advisability of involving U. N. in the precise formulation of American economic policy. We note with approval, too, his stipulation that the program must be evolved on the basis of economic considerations and not be "dispersed to those who yell 'wolf' loudest!" Most important, he has stated honestly that we should not expect repayment in dollars or manufactured goods.

But after having outlined an excellent proposal, Governor Stassen finds it somehow necessary to tie to it conditions which will make it impossible for Europe to accept his offer.

Governor Stassen knows full well that both the British government and the people living in the Ruhr area are convinced that its redevelopment can only be achieved through the socialization of its resources and plant equipment. He does not want its industries to be dominated by Nazis, or by cartels. But where does there exist large-scale investment capital in private hands today save among the Nazis and their collaborators—the masters of the cartels? May we assume then that what Governor Stassen means is that the Ruhr is to become an investment center for American capital regardless of the will of the people of Europe that it be socialized and controlled by an international commission for the benefit of the entire continent?

The second area in which Governor Stassen is interested is England, but his aid to Britain would be conditioned upon the maintenance of a "free economy" there. What does he mean by a "free economy" for Great Britain today? There is hardly a person in Britain who questions the necessity for planning. The point at issue is what the goals of the plan will be. Unless Governor Stassen is incredibly naive, what he means for Britain is that Tory planning by heads of corporations should replace Labor planning by the elected government. All available evidence is that the British people will stick to their choice of a Labor government. If Governor Stassen's views prevail, and American aid becomes dependent upon the "ditching" of that government, it would be a fair bet that American aid, not the government, would be thrown overboard.

Although there is no continental nation in which the forces of democratic planning have the sort of clear electoral majority that they have in Britain, it is nonetheless accurate to say that all of Europe is convinced that its reconstruction cannot be accomplished by capitalist devices. Even among nonsocialistic parties there is a widespread recognition of the need for semisocialist planning. There simply is not in Europe private capital available to do the job. American assistance has been asked by governments to get their plans under way. It will not be asked for or accepted if the United States adopts the Stassen policy, which says in effect, "We'll give you loans in kind or in cash in return for a mortgage on your economic future."

Every day Russia floods Europe with propaganda to the effect that dependence upon the United States, or alliance with us, means the loss of freedom for European peoples to plan their own destinies. If the United States adopts Governor Stassen's thinking, we will confirm that propaganda. In Europe not only has capitalism become unworkable but its beneficiaries have been demonstrated to be enemies of democracy. We cannot hope to effect an understanding with Europe's democrats if we ask them to abandon their opposition to a system which they recognize to be outmoded and corrupt.

If the American people are seriously interested in helping Europe maintain democracy, they must be prepared to acquiesce in the abolition of capitalism in Europe. The strength of the parties of Socialist democracy varies greatly from country to country. But no one who knows Europe today will seriously question that democratic socialism is the goal toward which the eyes of Europe are turned.

To Veto or Not to Veto

By Ernest K. Lindley

Labor Bill Dilemma

THE CONFERENCE committee has contrived a labor bill which is a vast improvement over the Hartley bill originally passed by the House. It is a bill which seems very likely to hold the two-thirds support in each House necessary to override a veto.

The President has received a great deal of advice about what to do with this bill—most of it unsolicited and all of it up to now based on conjecture as to the exact contents of the final version worked out in conference. This advice has revealed, among other things, widely different ideas about sound or smart political tactics.

According to one view, the most favorable outcome for the President would be an overridden veto. The veto would please labor. If it could be overridden, a troublesome issue would be at least partly disposed of; and the Administration would not have to shoulder the responsibility for blocking reforms which are widely considered necessary.

ACCORDING to another view, an overridden veto would injure the prestige of the President. The public loves and respects a winner, according to this analysis. The President, therefore, should avoid a veto which will not be sustained; if the labor bill is going to pass anyway, he should sign it and thus avoid a conspicuous defeat.

If the original Hartley bill, or something very close to it, had been adopted by both houses, the President's course would have been clear. He could have written a veto message which many people outside the labor movement, including many businessmen, would have regarded as well justified. The moderation of the conference bill is a sharp disappointment to labor leaders and others who hoped to see all labor reform legislation blocked. Good arguments can be made against many of the provisions of the bill now agreed upon. But many of them are fine-spun, and most of the others are unlikely to have much appeal except to the leaders of labor and part—although not all—of the rank and file of union membership.

Within the Cabinet firm opposition to the conference bill is reported to be limited to Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach and Postmaster General Hannegan. Some officials in the Administration who in the past have been consistently sympathetic with the labor movement are saying privately that while the final Taft-Hartley bill has a number of objectionable features it will not, if fairly administered, seriously impair the legitimate rights of unions.

A THIRD COURSE, recommended to the President by some, is to let the bill become law without his signature. This would be hard to reconcile with the President's habitual directness. It would be the weakest of the three alternatives open to him. On the side of labor, it would hurt him as much as would his open approval of the bill, while it would yield no compensating political advantages elsewhere.

The practical political effects of the President's action on this bill cannot be accurately estimated. What might be the best politics for Franklin D. Roosevelt may not be the best for Harry S. Truman. One of Mr. Truman's most valuable assets is simplicity. Under all the circumstances, his wisest course is to put aside all partisan political calculations and try to apply the yardstick of what is best for the general public.

Modern Art

May I add a word to the protest of your correspondent, H. L. McLeod (letter printed May 24), against modern art?

The modernist cannot substantiate many of his claims. He claims to be emphasizing the spiritual by disregarding or distorting the physical. I say that because an art object has no physical normal reality it does not follow that it has spiritual qualities. It may be that there is just nothing there at all. "Like the Emperor's New Clothes." Thieves stole his clothes and talked him into parading naked. It took a little child to say, "The Emperor is naked."

"Vital" and "spiritual" are two words much abused by the so-called moderns and their fellow travelers. Also abstractions. Because you yourself have just heard tell of a thing doesn't make it modern. The trouble with many moderns is that they have no history of art at their command. In other words they are just plain ignorant. If the thoughts depicted were transplanted into plain English they would be in jail. These co-called works of art belong only in pornographic collections. And pornographic collections belong in the furnace. LAURA K. POLLOCK.

Curious Expert

Would you kindly enlighten me and, I am sure, many of your readers, on the following puzzling question? Most students and visitors of the Soviet Union have reported and even Soviet authorities have admitted that Russia has not achieved communism. But in the United States, politicians are afraid of the importation of communism from Russia. Now, as a practical businessman, I cannot understand the amazing phenomenon how a country could export something it hasn't got.

Security For Nurses

A Communication

THE WAR focused public attention upon the nursing profession. More than ever nurses became the target of blame and praise. Since then what concerns them has become more and more of interest to the general public, because more and more people are realizing the important role nurses play in the contemporary world of illness and medical care.

It is therefore of public concern when a man who ought to know whereof he speaks is quoted as asserting that nurses are taking a "to-hell-with-patients" attitude. Going beyond this statement, Claude W. Munger, director of St. Luke's Hospital, in New York, charges that "the 'changed attitude' of nurses toward patients has resulted since the American Nurses Association adopted an economic security program last September."

Whether or not Mr. Munger's low estimate of the nurse's attitude toward her patients is true is not the question at this moment. It is rather the justness of his associating the 'changed attitude' with the economic program proposed by the American Nurses Association.

It is true that Mr. Munger did not say that the economic security program has caused the alleged indifference of nurses toward their patients. Yet he seems to imply such a connection. For this reason it is well to give a summary of that program.

THE ECONOMIC security program in question was approved unanimously at the September, 1946, meeting of the American National Nurses Association house of delegates. It provides that the several State and district nurses associations be "qualified to act as the exclusive agents of their respective memberships in the important fields of economic security and collective bargaining."

The purpose of this program is to use the nurses' professional associations for protecting and promoting their economic security and to provide reasonable and satisfactory conditions of employment. Yet the public has a share in the program. For it was thought by the house of delegates that the program would assure the public of professional nursing service of high quality and in adequate numbers.

For various reasons the delegates considered an economic security program needed. Rarely have nurses had working conditions, either in salary, hours or other factors, commensurate with their years of preparation and the responsibilities of their position. Because of working conditions, it is held, capable young women are not entering the nursing field, while in other instances some graduate nurses are leaving the profession. The enrollment of freshmen in schools of nursing for the years 1945 and 1946 is significant. For the 1029 schools reporting in 1945, there were 42,900 freshmen. In 1946, for the 1086 schools reporting, the number was 26,500.

It is maintained furthermore that a nurse cannot give the best quality nursing if she is harassed by insecurity and the inability to lead a satisfactory personal life. Finally, it is pointed out that practical insistence on reasonable employment conditions is not opposed to the "spirit of service" which has characterized the nursing profession.

THE OBJECTIVES proposed by the economic security program of the American Nursing Association are not new. When the association was founded in 1896, one of its purposes was to "promote the usefulness and honor, the financial and other interests of the nursing profession." Its more recent proposal to serve as a collective bargaining agency is but a new means to achieve its traditional aims.

Why should it be added to the means which have been used, such as education and persuasion? The answer given is that while some progress has been made to realize the economic and professional aims of nurses, the progress has been little and slow. "Nursing salaries have lagged far behind those of other workers with less preparation and less responsibility. Nurses," it is further claimed, "have never had a real opportunity to participate in the determination of the conditions under which they are employed; they have had to accept what was given to them."

A word may be said to suggest how the economic security program is intended to work. The aim is that nurses in the same type of work should determine for their region the conditions of their employment. Thus staff nurses, working through the State section for staff nurses, would determine what should be the minimum, reasonable and State-wide conditions of their special employment. These standards would then be given ample publicity and brought to the attention of hospital and medical groups.

In many instances no difficulty would arise about their adoption. If a hospital refused to accept them there would be no strike or walkout. The situation would be laid before the public, and the State association could enter into negotiations with the hospital authorities in an effort to reach a written agreement, satisfactory to both hospital administration and nurses.

COLLECTIVE bargaining is not an end in itself. It is proposed as a modern, widely accepted means to achieve objectives which always have been fostered by the American Nursing Association and which are indisputably valid. Collective bargaining, it need not be stressed, is not a synonym for "union" or "labor union." It can and should be a method to reconcile the conflicting interests of parties who need each other. Properly used it can result in a contract or treaty, or in what better might be called an alliance between the parties.

In the economic security program it is difficult to find grounds to sustain charges that it would lead, or has led, nurses to neglect their patients. If this condition does exist and to the extent Mr. Munger says it does, the causes must be sought outside the economic program, which, after all, was proposed only last September.

Nurses themselves have been critical of the growing materialism in their ranks. Some have voiced pleas for a return to the higher ideals which characterized, for example, Florence Nightingale's outlook. But it seems a grave simplification to trace this lowered idealism merely to the ambition of nurses to have reasonable pay and working conditions.

Florence Nightingale looked upon nursing as an expression of religion. Her position was exalted and perhaps exaggerated. But if nursing is to be what even to this day the popular view of it is, then it must be based on something more than a materialistic view of man and of the nurse's relation to her patient. If starched efficiency, or inefficiency, has replaced the more human relationships between nurse and patient, it is largely because the human element has lost its spiritual outlook.

MR. MUNGER'S charges about nurses neglecting patients may be true to some extent. And to the extent that they are true it is regretable and indefensible. But the cause certainly is not in the proposed economic security program. Mr. Munger's charges were accepted as true by Mr. Robert G. Whitton, administrator of Alexandria Hospital and president of the Carolinas-Virginias Hospital Conference. "What Munger said is what a lot of us have been wanting to say a long time. While there are many fine, conscientious nurses, we all feel that the nursing profession as a whole has lost a little bit of that 'call' it formerly had in which the patient was primary and pay secondary."

Mr. Whitton's remarks are certainly closer to the truth than Mr. Munger's unqualified assertion that nurses are taking a "to-hell-with-patients" attitude and connecting the alleged attitude with the economic security program.

If the ideals of nurses have suffered some degradation, then the reasons for trying to restore the spiritual ideals should be no less insisted upon than the nurses' just demands for reasonable pay and working conditions. Economic security and happiness in an attractive profession and a high idealism are not incompatible terms. Rather they are factors which mutually condition each other and must be sought together.

Veterans Struggle For Education

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—The cost of a college degree can be very high. For many of the 15,000 veterans here at the University of Minnesota, it is high in terms of sacrifice and even privation.

Childs

With a total enrollment of 25,000 students, the problem of finding a place to live is acute. Young couples with children find it especially difficult. They are suffering under the wicked squeeze of the inflation that bedevils us.

To help out, the university established University Village on a ten-acre site. It is also called Fertile Acres, and you understand why when you see the procession of baby buggies and the innumerable toddlers. You can duplicate University Village on almost any large campus in the country as educators try to cope with mass education.

To be eligible to live in University Village, you must be a married veteran with a child or a child soon to be born. In 214 trailers, 96 prefabs, 100 quonset huts and 124 barracks, there are 534 families.

You move from the waiting list into a trailer. The trailers have no running water. There are community bath houses for men and women. Cooking is done on a small kerosene stove.

If you're lucky, you will move after a few months from a trailer to half a quonset hut, or to a family unit in one of the barracks with running water and plumbing.

TAKE A TYPICAL family in University Village. Let's call them the Bill Smiths. Bill is 25. He was in his second year of engineering when he was drafted into the Army, where he served nearly five years in almost every theater of the war. He was discharged with the rank of major.

Bill and his wife, Betty, are one of the lucky families in half a quonset hut. They have a daughter two and a half and another child on the way.

Making ends meet is tough—very tough. Bill has his $90 a month under the GI bill. He makes about $90 more as a night watchman on the shift from midnight to 3:30 a. m. In the winter, when fires have to be tended, that is no easy job.

Because Bill's income is over $120 a month, the university charges him $44 a month for his half of a quonset. Right at the start that takes a big bite out of the family income. Bill and Betty are trying to save up money for the new baby. They estimate the cost will be a minimum of $150, and that means leaving the hospital for the quonset hut as soon as the doctor permits.

I asked Bill when he found time to study. Third-year engineering isn't a pipe course. Grinning at this question, he said that study had to be sandwiched in at any and all hours. The couple next door, he pointed out, are both taking full courses, the husband in the daytime and the wife at night.

Both Betty and Bill are feeling the burden. The doctor tells Bill he must slow up. Betty, who is pretty and delicate-looking, is not well.

There is no play center, nothing but the dusty, cinder-covered street. The youngster is a constant source of anxiety. Since the beginning of spring, a dozen children have strayed away and frantic mothers have had to appeal to the police for help.

THE UNIVERSITY is trying to find a surplus building that could be used as a child care center and as a recreation hall for the grownups. But that will cost, Bill has been told, $40,000 to $60,000 to equip and maybe it won't be possible. Certainly it is badly needed, as is also a health clinic.

Yet Bill and Betty do not complain. They are remarkably patient. Bill says:

"Well, I guess they're trying to do the best they can for us. And after all, It's an education."

That's one of the extraordinary things about the Army of veterans that has come back. Contrary to the dire talk we heard while they were away, they have become part of the normal life of the country with very little dislocation.

The test will come, it seems to me, when Bill and the millions like him finish this education grind. If they step out into a job that pays a fair salary, then all will be well. But if the jobs aren't there, then I think we will hear from the men who have adjusted so readily to the pursuits of peace.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

Labor Bill Veto?

THERE IS NO foundation for the widespread assumption that President Truman is certain to sign the labor bill. By the efforts of Senator Irving Ives and others, the bill has been stripped of the most obvious whips and scorpions. Therefore, the President may swallow hard and withhold his veto. But he will do so only after as anxious an inner debate as the White House has heard in this Administration, and with heartfelt misgivings on several different scores.

The odds on what the President will do have been changed, moreover, by the increasing threat of a third party headed by Henry Agard Wallace. If there were no third party threat, the President would probably sign the labor bill despite his distaste for many of its clauses. That would be the practical thing to do, since the bill can be passed over his veto in any case. And it remains the consensus of advice from his Cabinet, in which a majority still favors signing the bill and having done.

The betting has now been brought down at least to even, however, for the proveto faction of presidential advisers, headed by Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach, has acquired a powerful argument. The President's signature on the labor bill will be tantamount, by their reasoning, to his signature on a third party manifesto primarily directed against himself. A third party would elect no one, and probably poll only a million or so votes, but it would certainly cost the Democrats key States like New York and California, which they must carry to win.

AS REPORTED in this space some days ago, the danger of a third party movement has been vastly strengthened by the wild Wallace barnstorming tour across the country. The tour has obviously sapped Wallace's remaining caution. It has placed him in a relationship to the American Communists and fellow travelers hardly different from the relation of the captive Italian Socialist, the pitiful Nenni, to his political jailer, Palmiro Togliatti. The tour has also produced financing, and an embryo third pary organization in the form of an augmented Progressive Citizens of America. These are solid assets to be used, whenever it seems suitable, by the American Communists who have been plugging a third party for many months.

There is only one real obstacle to the Communists starting their fellow travelers to spark Wallace into action without further delay. Their foothold in the labor movement is the most valued Communist asset. If they push Wallace into a third party movement on the issue of foreign policy alone, they will inevitably lose ground in the labor movement as they did so markedly in the period of the Stalin-Hitler pact. No sensible labor leader of the stripe of Philip Murray in the CIO, and Dan Tobin in the AFL wants a third party, and especially a third party headed by Wallace and internally dominated by reliable fellow travelers. In fact, they want to fight such a party if they can. And if the third party proponents have no issue but foreign policy, these labor leaders will fight. The upshot might be final loss to the Communists of the labor foothold which they cherish above all.

This explains, in turn, the desperate pleas which have been indirectly transmitted to the White House from many of the labor leaders. While the labor bill is full of minor gimmicks intended to hamper labor unionism, it is certainly not the "slave labor bill" which the labor leaders call it. But it is as much a symbol for labor as for business. And if Truman signs the labor bill, stamping it with his public approval, the labor leadership cannot fight on Truman's side.

THEY WILL be effectively neutralized in 1948, and the Communists can go ahead with their third-party plans without worrying about the effects on their labor strength. The exact contrary will be the case, however, if Truman follows a ringing veto of the tax bill, as "class legislation" favorable to the very rich, with a firm veto of the labor bill. The labor leaders will fight manfully for Truman. And Wallace and his allies will then have nothing to mouth about, except the peculiar Wallace foreign policy.

There is no doubt that the majority of the country would oppose a labor bill veto. If he listens to his proveto advisers, who include the bosses of the Northern Democratic organizations, the President must accept a temporary setback to avoid future trouble. And the trouble may come anyway. But there is this also to be said. All major labor disputes are satisfactorily settled, except in coal, despite ominous recent developments, the Administration is cautiously optimistic about an eventual coal settlement, partly because John L. Lewis would be taking a great risk to lead his men into a third costly strike in twelve months and partly because the Southern operators have privately signified their willingness to accept any contract signed by the Northern operators. If there is no coal strike, the labor issue will progressively lose intensity as labor peace continues. By 1948 a Truman veto of the labor bill will then only be remembered by organized labor with gratitude and with fury by the people who would vote Republican in any case.

Such are the practical considerations on the side of a veto, the objections of the White House to the bill itself (which are considerable) have been purposely omitted. But one word needs to be added to this discussion of practical politics. After hunger and misery, the greatest danger to freedom in the world today is the fear-begotten tendency of peoples everywhere to go to the extreme right or the extreme left. Simply as a means of forestalling this tendency in the United States, President Truman can argue that a veto of the labor bill is in the interest of the general welfare.

Greek Political Leader Fears Both Extremes

By M. W. Fodor
Post Reporter

Athens, June 1.—"We would welcome American financial aid under two conditions: First, American help should only be used for reconstruction (and not military) purposes, and, second, such help should be given to a government which would inspire more or less general confidence, but which also would be able to start proper reconstruction work. The present government has proved incapable for such a task."

Prof. Alexander Svolos, at present leader of the Greek Social-Democratic Party, uttered the above opinion to your correspondent. Professor Svolos was before the war professor of national economy at the University of Athens. During the war he headed the resistance movement against the Germans and Italians, and from April, 1944, until September 7, 1944, he was the president of the Greek government-in-the-mountains. Then he became head of EAM, the Greek National Liberation Movement, was minister of finance in the large coalition government before the civil war. He left EAM when the latter became obviously Communist-dominated.

Extremists Feared

"I believe sincerely in the democratic idea—in its western sense," said Svolos. "The best way to confine communism within its boundaries is to oppose it by true democracy."

Talking about the actual political conditions in Greece, Svolos expressed the belief that under normal circumstances the Communists in Greece could never obtain more than 15 per cent of the votes.

"If, however, the present extremist right policy will prevail," continued Svolos, "then Communist strength will increase, instead of decreasing. Even the liberal center would lose strength. Then ultimately the country would be divided into an extremist, more or less fascistic right and a communistic left."

According to Professor Svolos, the present one-sided situation cannot encourage popular enthusiasm for reconstruction. The present regime cannot, and does not, want to impose sacrifices on its followers, such as just taxation.

Russia Is "Almost Neighbor"

Talking about the foreign political implications of the present situation, Professor Svolos asserted that friendship for and deep interest in the United States should not involve Greece into antagonism against any power—this would be dangerous for the permanent interests of the country. "You must keep in mind that Russia is now almost our neighbor," exclaimed Svolos.

"You must also keep in mind that President Truman's message has encouraged the right to continue their 'dynamic' policy (he apparently meaning by this the right's claims for certain territorial aims in Albania and Bulgaria)."

When I asked Professor Svolos what methods he would suggest for the pacification of souls in the country, he answered:

"Military operations cannot solve this problem. The left was defeated by military means previously and an armistice was made at Varkitza. Military operations would only complicate the situation. We, the Social Democrats, were the first to proclaim the policy of 'appeasement'—since then the liberal leader, Themistocles Sophoulis, has also adopted this shibboleth. Both the right and the left must make sacrifices. We criticize British policy because the British, after defeating the left, instead of becoming arbiters, made themselves allies of the right.

Avenues of Settlement

"We consider two ways the most suitable for settlement of the present crisis: First, political pacification by 'appeasement,' and, second, an international action to secure Greece's frontiers and independence. We go further than the Ethridge report. We realize that our geographical situation compels us to be friends both to the Mediterranean powers, namely, United States and Britain, and to the ruler of southeastern Europe, Russia.

"We must begin with general amnesty without exceptions—then we must establish equality of treatment for all citizens and prepare new and fair elections, supervised by a new government which would inspire and enjoy general confidence. Not even a broadened government of the right could act as such an umpire. To our mind the most appropriate government would be one which includes the forces of the left, headed by somebody of the center parties, such as the Cox report suggested. (Mr. Cox was heading a British parliamentary commission, comprising delegates of all English parties which drafted a report on Greece.) Something in the spirit of the Cox report may prove the best solution. But the dissolution of the present Parliament is absolutely essential," concluded Professor Svolos.

Vote Proceeds Quietly In Ecuador Election

Guyaquil, June 1 (AP).—Ecuador voters cast their ballots today for members of the National Chamber of Deputies and Senate. Although women were eligible to vote, few balloted the first part of the day.

Treaty Plan For Isles Rule Wins Favor

By the United Press

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee believes that United States Administration of the former Japanese-mandated islands should be established by treaty to enhance American prestige in the United Nations, it was revealed yesterday.

The committee, headed by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), threshed out the question of treaty versus congressional resolution at a closed meeting last week. The chief witness was retiring Undersecretary of State Dean Acheson.

Pro and con debate started when Acheson asked the committee which type of action it prefers when the United States assumes administration of the islands—the Marianas, Marshalls and Carolines—all in the Pacific.

Under the plan already approved by the United Nations Security Council, the United Nations will become trustees of the mandates; with the United States administering them.

The final decision is up to President Truman. A treaty would require a two thirds ratification vote of the Senate. A resolution needs only majority approval by both houses. Either one merely would authorize the President to sign in behalf of the United States.

Banditry Doesn't Pay in China

By The Associated Press

Over a weekend crowded with plane disasters and holiday deaths you may have bypassed a pathetic little story about a Yangtze River pirate and his victim.

The latter fainted when relieved of 13 million dollars of China's inflated currency, and the jovial water-bandit allowed him to take back what he could grab from a bag with both hands.

He came upout of the basket with $200,000, and this is where everything gets pathetic for everybody.

The man had borrowed the 13 million, so must go on paying outrageous interest rates. Meanwhile his $200,000 will buy about 60 pounds of rice. If his government would let him buy American currency at the official rate he would get $16.66 with his $200,000. If he had to go to the black market it would have brought only $8 American on the day he was robbed, but by the time he got back to Shanghai the next day it would have brought only $6 American.

The news about the river pirate was not that he was holding someone up, but that he gave something back to his victim.

Wet, Cool Spring Hampers Sowing of Grains, Soybeans

By The Associated Press

A wet, cool spring has seriously hampered the sowing of such vital grains as corn, oats and barley, officials reported today, and delayed the planting of soybeans, an important source of scarce food fats.

The result, they contend, is to emphasize President Truman's requests that Congress continue for another year the Government's authority to control the export of scarce foods, now scheduled to expire June 30.

Otherwise, officials say, the United States might see its supplies raided by foreign buyers, causing new shortages and higher prices.

Under existing controls, the Agriculture Department allocates supplies of scarce foods among foreign nations. The latter can ship out of this country no more than is allotted them. The allocation plan reserves for this country supplies deemed by the department to be adequate.

But should Congress fail to extend this authority to control exports, foreign countries could come in and buy all they wanted—within the limits of their ability to pay for it, and the availability of transportation.

Unrestricted foreign buying would be concentrated largely on grains, particularly wheat and corn. With this year's world crop of cereals expected to continue far short of demands, overseas buying could deplete supplies of wheat for American consumption.

Officials explain that should harvests turn out favorably, this country still could help shortage areas with feeds through the allocations system. With a record winter wheat crop virtually assured, this country is planning to ship about as much of this grain abroad as was exported from the 1946 crop.

Meanwhile the Agriculture Department announced late cables report the 1947 grain crop in Greece will be considerably smaller than last year's small crop because of drought damage.

Upside-Down Landing Saves Pilot, 3 Others

Annapolis, Md., June 1 (AP).—A quick-thinking Navy pilot was credited with saving four lives at 2 p. m. today when he landed safely after a "freak wind" prevented his take-off here at Lee Airport.

Lieut. Comdr. Conrad J. Welling of Edgewater, Md., landed his pusher-type Republic Seabee plane upside down in a plowed field after a sharp turn at 20-foot altitude in order to avoid crashing into a power line, Airport Manager J. W. Tyler said.

Welling, his wife and baby daughter and a New York physician stepped out of the plane "without a scratch," Tyler said.

Welling's plane had become airborne after taking off crosswind on the 3000-foot runway but "did not gain altitude," the pilot's accident report said.

The plane turned turtle, tail over nose, one wing was ripped off and the metal cabin pushed in, Tyler said.

The airport manager, an air force veteran, said "a freak wind" had kept the plane from gaining altitude, and if Welling had not banked and cut his engines he would have crashed into a 3400-volt high-tension line along a highway at the far end of the runway.

Martial Law, Curfew Curb China Strike

Shanghai, China, (Monday) June 2 (U.P.).—The day of China's threatened "general strike" dawned with factories and stores generally unaffected after police and military authorities had clamped martial law on much of the country.

The government apparently was winning the first round of what it claimed was a showdown with Communists in Nationalist territory after imposing mass arrests, censorship and curfew.

No one was allowed on the streets of Mukden between 8:30 p. m. and 6 a. m. Violators were threatened with the death penalty.

At least 200 alleged Communist agents were known to have been rounded up in north, central and eastern parts of China. The largest series of arrests was at Chungking, the wartime capital, where 80 students and 21 newspapermen were arrested the night of May 31-June 1.

Martial law already is in effect in Shanghai. Reports reaching here said martial law, curfews and the prohibition of gatherings had been declared by garrison commanders in Chungking, Canton and Tientsin.

Student associations in Nanking and Peiping, reversing the trend, announced that demonstrations scheduled for tomorrow had been called off.

American military authorities in Shanghai ordered all Army personnel to stay off the streets tomorrow unless they were traveling on business.

Nicaraguans Want Revolt, Writer Finds

(The writer of this dispatch covered the aftermath of the Somoza coup in Nicaragua, and now has returned to Mexico City, where he wrote without censorship.)

By Reginald L. Wood

Mexico City, June 1 (AP).—The Nicaraguan coup of former President Anastasio Somoza which overthrew the 26-day-old government of President Leonard Arguello may be short-lived. The country is ripe for revolution.

General Somoza, strong man of the Central American republic for the last 10 years, maintains his strength largely through the support of the 4500-man National Guard, and a relatively small political minority.

Would Rise Tomorrow

Although Somoza's hand-picked Congress quickly appointed a new President who will do his bidding, the position of strong man is not secure. Scores of Nicaraguans who talked to me in dark alleys and visited me in the middle of the night said that given leadership and a pistol they would rise tomorrow.

Many sections of the country are seething with unrest. Whether this resentment will come to a head depends largely on whether arms are smuggled into the country.

Arguello, who took office May 1, became in 26 days the most popular Nicaraguan leader in a score of years. Although elected with Somoza's support, Arguello promised that he would not be anyone's puppet—and lived up to the pledge.

Appeared Without Guard

He appointed cabinet ministers of proven integrity, and won the heart of the people when he appeared in the business district of Managua without an armed guard.

Congress, at a special session Monday night, named roly-poly Benjamin Lacayo Sacasa as provisional president. Somoza then selected a cabinet and released it to the press in the name of the new president. A few minutes before it was announced, Lacayo Sacasa did not even know who the members were.

Arguello and many of his supporters obtained asylum in the Mexican embassy at Managua. Many of the supporters have left the country, among them Capt. Francisco Aruirre Baca, once Somoza's right-hand man, who fled to the United States.

President's Mother Gains Some Strength

Grandview, Mo. June 1 (AP).—Mrs. Martha E. Truman gained a little in strength today, taking a little more nourishment than usual since she started her recovery from her critical illness, Brig. Gen. Wallace Graham reported tonight.

The 94-year-old mother of President Truman spent the day in her new oscillating bed, which is "working nicely," said Graham, personal physician to the President.

Soviet Tells Germans to Forget War Rumors Because 'Peace Is Secure for a Long Time'

Berlin, June 1 (U.P.).—A Soviet major, undoubtedly speaking for the Russian occupation command, advised the Germans tonight by radio to forget spreading rumors of an imminent new war, because "peace is secure for a long time . . ."

The speaker was identified by the announcer as "Major Savaliev." He spoke on powerful, Russian-controlled Radio Berlin, in the first such direct radio appeal the Russians ever have made to the Germans.

"Peace is secure for a long time, because not a single government can wage war against the will of its people," Savaliev said.

Savaliev told the Germans it was characteristic of their minds to believe serious differences can be settled only by armed conflict. He said he wanted to assure them that this was not the case. There were some people in Germany, he said, "who hope to profit by war" between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Schumacher Assails Allies

Frankfurt, Germany, June 1 (U.P.). Dr. Kurt Schumacher, leader of the Social Democratic Party, today vigorously attacked the policies of the occupying powers in what probably was the most outspoken criticism made by a German since the occupation.

Alternately shouting and purring as he addressed 8000 party members, the fiery, one-armed Socialist leader demanded that German industrial production be increased and exports permitted to allow Germany to import badly needed food.

"We Germans cannot be bought with Russian cigarettes nor with American CARE (food) packages," he shouted.

"There is an iron curtain in front of the eastern zone and a silken curtain that obscures the view in front of the western zones," he continued. "As for we Germans, we get so few calories our eyes have gone bad and we can't see out into the rest of the world."

"It took The Post to sell our Puppies"
says Mrs. C. W. Barton,
4541 S. Dak. Ave. N.E.

Major and Mrs. Barton are Irish terrier fanciers. Here's one of their latest litters of pedigreed pups. The Bartons find both pleasure and profit in their pets—pleasure in having them around the house and profit in selling extra pups through The Post.

Just the other day, for instance, Mrs. Barton advertised four of the puppies for sale in The Post and in two other Washington newspapers. Post want ads scored a clean sweep! All four puppies were sold within five days—all four to people who had specifically seen the notice in The Post. The ad cost $3.90; the sale brought $220.

THESE DO IT
— four big-but-gentle coil springs permit each wheel to "step over" bumps as it reaches them.
It is this independent action of each wheel that gives Buick its matchless buoyancy on any and all roads.

SKIP styling for a moment — it's pretty well admitted by now that Buick has called the turn on the shape of cars to come.

And for the present, slide over performance — with that big bonnetful of Fireball power, nobody's going to challenge you much on the open road.

What else has the trim Buick got that others can't quite come up to?

You find one big answer where the cobbles are plentiful, the car tracks tangled, the bumps big.

This brawny traveler has a ride — a smooth, level, easy stride that makes you think of a canoe drifting in quiet waters.

One reason: It was Buick that first introduced the American public to soft, gentle coil springing on all four wheels.

It was Buick that first made it possible for each wheel to step over bumps as they came along, leaving the frame and body to pursue their level way undisturbed.

Buick's coil springs keep their gentle softness always. They need no greasing or attention. They are unaffected by dirt, wear or the weather, and breakage is practically unheard of.

The net of it all is that you put yourself on Easy Street when you seat yourself in a Buick. You make every road a better road — every ride an adventure in smooth and buoyant comfort.

Why not drop in and learn more? Whether you have a car to trade or want to talk on a "clean deal" basis, you'll always find a warm welcome here.

When better automobiles are built BUICK will build them

Di Maggio's Grand Slam Drops Tribe

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

AT $80,000 A YEAR, Bob Feller is not only the highest paid pitcher in history, but this season he is qualifying as the most overpaid. Did you notice that on Saturday he was knocked out of the box for the fourth straight time? If the Indians blow the pennant by any thin margin, an accusing finger can be pointed at Feller, perhaps.

POVICH

Never before have American League hitters found Feller such a soft touch. His pitching this year has been strictly that of an in-and-outer, as seen by his record of five wins and five defeats. Two of his victories have been one-hitters. When he hasn't been winning easily, however, he has been getting bumped hard. He's no longer the awesome guy who figured to win every game he started and strike out an average of 11 guys in the doing.

If there is any clew to the comparative incompetence of Feller this season, it can be traced, perhaps, to the 30-day barnstorming trip he took last October with his own troupe known as Feller's All-Stars. Feller pitched in 30 of the 35 games his club played during those 30 days, and there was a doubtful shaking of heads when he set that task for himself. The tour netted him an extra $40,000, but he used up a lot of pitches that might have helped the Indians this year.

FELLER'S $80,000 SALARY is based in part on bonuses for attendance figures at the Indians' home games, and President Bill Veeck is not reluctant to cut Rapid Robert in for some of the profits as long as the pitcher attracts those big crowds. It's a condition that will obtain, however, only as long as Feller is an attraction. When Feller can't produce 20 victories a year he'll slide into the category of just another pitcher who must haggle over an $18,000 contract.

Into Feller's 1947 contract has been written the provision that he will be given permission to barnstorm again for 30 days with his Feller All-Stars after the World Series. The tour represents rich pickings for him, but Veeck's permission is not all that is required. Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler has the last word, and Chandler may not be disposed to go for another Feller barnstorming trip.

Chandler waived the 10-day limit for barnstorming last year and the season before on the theory that fellows like Feller had sacrificed much in baseball earnings while in the armed services and were entitled to recoup a bit. So he permitted 30-day tours after the World Series. But Feller, making more than $150,000 this year from various enterprises, is no longer a needy case, Chandler may reason, logically enough.

MEANWHILE HAL NEWHOUSER, Feller's opposite number with the Detroit Tigers, who for the past couple of years has been rated one-two with the Cleveland fireballer as the best pitchers in the league, is also having his troubles. Like Feller, he has won only five games against five defeats, and thus far this year he isn't even the best pitcher on his own club. Freddie Hutchinson is the new Detroit hero with five wins in six decisions.

It's a tough year on pitchers in the American League, anyway. Not one of them can show more than five victories at this stage of the season, in contrast to the National League, where three men—Schoolboy Rowe, Dutch Leonard and Ewell Blackwell—have won six games, and a fourth, Warren Spahn of the Braves, has eight victories in a row without a defeat.

Freddie Hutchinson's success with the Tigers, however, has been long overdue. He never before justified his $75,000 purchase price from the Coast League two years before the war, but the suspicion always was that he would. This season he has been pitching the best ball in the American League along with Rookie Frank Shea of the Yankees, who also has five wins in six decisions.

THE BEST PITCHER in the American League, according to Bucky Harris, however, is neither Feller nor Newhouser, nor Hutchinson nor even Harris' own rookie sensation, Shea. "The best pitcher in this league," Harris was saying the other day, "is Sid Hudson, and I honestly got a thrill out of it the day he beat us, 1 to 0, in Yankee Stadium."

Harris can be forgiven for his partiality toward Hudson. It was Harris who prophesied stardom for the fellow the moment he laid eyes on Hudson's delivery in a Washington training camp seven years ago when Hudson came to him out of the Class D Florida State League. Hudson's failure to win for the Nats in his first seven starts didn't disturb Harris' faith in the tall righthander.

"He's a sweet pitcher now," Harris was saying. "He has all that polish, and savvy that makes a pitcher great, and he always was the best fielding pitcher I ever did see. His fast ball isn't the fastest and his curve isn't the best, but there's nothing wrong with his pitching heart, and you put all his assets together and he's the toughest guy to beat in our league."

Nats Take Another Day Off—Rain

By Al Costello
Post Reporter

Detroit, June 1.—The Nats continue to find Detroit a tough town in which to accomplish anything in the way of baseball or victories.

Today's double-header was washed out in an all-day long rain that finally convinced the die-hard Tiger management it wouldn't stop after waiting a full hour after the 1:30 p. m. starting time. Some 8000 fans who showed up, too.

It was the fourth game in three playing dates the Nats have been forced to forego here. On their last trip here in early May a two-game series was completely snowed away.

The Nats have yet to win a game in Detroit or, for that matter, against the Tigers. They dropped two in Washington on the Tigers' first Eastern swing and made it three in a row yesterday despite a pair of two-run homers by the explosive bat of the red-hot Stan Spence.

Same Pitchers

Another double bill is scheduled for tomorrow with both Nat Manager Ossie Bluege and Tiger Pilot Steve O'Neill sticking to the pitching choices that were to prevail today.

That would be Ray Scarborough and Bobo Newsom for the Nats opposed to Hal White and Alton Benton.

Bluege, in moving Scarborough into a starting role, is convinced the big right-hander is at last ready to live up to the promise he gave last year when he rejoined the Nats after a tour in the Navy as a lieutenant.

Used exclusively this year as a relief hurler, after a dismal training showing, Scarborough has shown continued improvement with each appearance. In his last 12 2/3 innings, against the Indians, Chisox, Athletics and Yankees, has has surrendered only two runs, only one of which was earned. During that span he allowed 10 hits, several of which were of the scratch variety.

Bats in Lapse

Biggest worry Bluege has right now is the relapse of Nats bats into the slump that practically ruined their home stay. Outside of Spence and Buddy Lewis the club has been dismal, indeed, at the plate.

Just two days ago, Decoration Day, Bluege had hopes the Nats had at last broken their hitting shackles when they pounded out 11 hits good for 13 runs in the first game against the Boston Red Sox, which the Nats won, 13-6.

Then on the same day, in the second game, the Nats could get only five hits off Joe Dobson and Earl Johnson and were fortunate to come off with a 5-3 victory.

Two Big Hits

Yesterday the Nats could get only four safeties off Frank "Stubby" Overmire, Tiger left-hander who usually is more or less easy meat for the Washington club. It would have been a 5-0 victory instead of a squeaky 5-4 Tiger victory had not Spence and his big bat stepped in on two occasions.

At any rate, the Nats still aren't hitting enough and by this time it has ceased to be just "one of those things" that will eventually be overcome.

As of now it's more serious than ever.

Landon Tennis Coach Says He's a Lucky Guy, Because He Hits Jackpot With a Winner

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

COACH DWIGHT COLLINS of the Landon Boys School tennis team considers himself a pretty lucky guy.

Up until this year, he had served as coach of the Landon team for 15 seasons without so much as coming up with a District interscholastic championship team.

But this year, he has hit the jackpot.

Not only has Landon just about clinched the city championship, but it is a fair bet to win the national scholastic title.

"A coach has to be lucky to get a dream team like I've been handed this year," says the 39-year-old Collins. "It's no fault of mine that the Landon team includes the likes of Gil Bogley, the national boys singles and doubles champion, Jack Yates, runner-up to Bogley for Washington's junior championship and Ted Rogers, Washington's boys titlist.

"They just happened to come along at the same time, and when one team has the three best players in a city the size of Washington, it really has something.

"And what is even more fortunate is that all will be back next year."

BOGLEY and Yates, Landon's No. 1 and 2 players, are undefeated this season. This pair has paced Landon to nine victories without a defeat against the best that Washington, Virginia, Maryland, Delaware and New England had to offer.

Landon's toughest opposition was provided by the Naval Academy Plebes and the Deerfield, Mass., Academy, which were beaten by 5-4 scores. The Deerfield team had been undefeated against New England scholastic opposition for seven years before running into the Landon group.

Only one match remains on the Landon regular slate, and that one is against Woodrow Wilson, recent winner of the inter-high crown. Victory over Wilson today will entitle Landon to claim of the city's scholastic championship.

Next on the agenda is the Middle Atlantic scholastic tournament at Columbia Country Club on June 9, and Landon is favored to win, having beaten every major entry in it. If it comes through at Columbia, Landon will then compete in the national interscholastic championships at Charlottesville, Va., on June 30.

COLLINS says, "I'd stack this team up against any high school team in the country and bet that it would do very well. We've got balance from Bogley, Yates and Rogers right on down through Emerson Gardner, Rusty Bullard and Raymond Lewis."

The Middle Atlantic and National tourneys have created a lot of anticipation among the Landon boys, but the one that has stirred the most excitement is the Manursing Club Invitational on June 16-21 at Rye, N. Y.

John Fox, a friend of Collins, has agreed to fly the team to Rye in his own 16-passenger Lockheed Lodestar.

Joe Hits Two Of 6 Homers In 11-9 Tilt

Cleveland, June 1 (AP).—Jolting Joe DiMaggio's grand slam eighth-inning homer, his second four-bagger of the game, paced the New York Yankees to an 11-9 victory over the Cleveland Indians today in a wild, rain-delayed opener of a scheduled double-header.

Six circuit clouts were rapped in the tilt as nine pitchers saw action.

The second game was called off on account of darkness.

DiMaggio's clout climaxed a five-run rally by the Yankees after a pair of homers had put Cleveland ahead, 7-6, in the seventh frame in a weird game viewed by 47,132 fans.

The Yankee clipper smashed his first round-tripper in the second after Charley Keller rapped his twelfth of the year to give New York a 2-0 margin. Rain then delayed the game for more than an hour and the scheduled night-cap later was postponed because of darkness.

New York moved ahead 5-1 in the top half of the fifth, but the Indians rallied in their half of the frame to knot the count, 5-5. Homers by Relief Pitcher Bob Lemon, who was charged with the loss, and Hal Peck then gave the Tribe its momentary lead before DiMaggio clinched the verdict for the Yanks.

A two-run four-bagger by Rookie First Sacker Eddie Robinson in the eighth cut New York's margin to two runs, but Southpaw Joe Page contributed his second bit of sparkling relief hurling in two days to throttle the Tribe.

Heath Hits 6th Homer As Browns Win, 7-2

St. Louis, June 1 (U.P.).—Jack Kramer won his first victory in a month here today as he pitched the St. Louis Browns to a 7-2 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics in the first game of a scheduled doubleheader. The second game was called because of rain.

Kramer got off to a shaky start when Eddie Joost tripled to start the game and Elmer Valo followed with his second home run of the season. But he settled down and held the A's to four other scattered hits.

Jeff Heath's triple and Vern Stephens' fourth homer of the year finished out the four-run inning and Heath connected for his sixth htomer of the year in the fifth with two on to complete the scoring.

Giants Keep Lead, Split With Reds

New York June, 1 (U.P.).—The New York Giants retained their National League lead today by outslugging the Cincinnati Reds, 13 to 9, in the second game of a doubleheader after Eddie Miller's ninth-inning homer gave the Reds a 5 to 3 victory in the opener before 45,795 fans.

The split left the Giants a half-game in front of the Chicago Cubs, who won a single game from Philadelphia, 4 to 3.

Miller's homer, his 10th of the season, came with one man on in the first game to break a 3-3 tie and gave Giant hurler Larry Jansen, who went all the way, his second defeat.

Bill Rigney opened the Giants' eighth with a homer against Joe Beggs, who had relieved starting pitcher Elmer Riddle.

Cubs Defeat Phillies, 4-3

Philadelphia, June 1 (AP).—Clyde McCullough's triple after Bob Sturgeon had reached first on Jim Tabor's error in the eighth inning broke a 3-3 tie and gave Chicago a 4-3 victory over the Phillies here today in a single game before 14,841.

It was the Cubs' seventh straight win of the year over the Phillies and the sixth time they triumphed by a one-run margin. Henry Wyse was relieved by Russ Meyer in the seventh. Meyer received credit for his first victory of the year.

Bums' Rookie Stops Cardinals

Brooklyn, June 1 (AP).—Rookie right-hander Harry Taylor came through with another fine pitching performance today as he held the St. Louis Cardinals to five hits in leading the Brooklyn Dodgers to a 6-1 victory over the world champions.

The largest Ebbetts Field crowd of the season—34,109 paying customers—saw the sturdy recruit hang up his second straight five-hitter to make his record 2-1. He whipped the New York Giants the last time out.

Taylor was given 19-hit support against the Giants and today the Brooks continued their fine efforts in his behalf by pasting four Card hurlers for 11 hits, including seven off Harry (The Cat) Breechen.

Ted Wilks, who relieved Brecheen, was hit in the face by a drive off Taylor's bat but was able to walk off the field. He suffered a bruised jaw.

Steady Vet Wins Easily In 4 Sets

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

Barney Welsh, the District's perennial tennis champion, defeated 25-year-old Dave Johnsen, 6—3, 1—6, 6—1, 6—2, yesterday to win the City of Washington tennis tournament at the 16th and Kennedy courts.

Before a large crowd, Welsh again proved that steadiness is a hard thing to beat. The lanky veteran played an unspectacular, back court game, and allowed Johnsen to make the errors.

Welsh took the first set without much trouble, breaking through Johnsen's service three times with the help of five double faults by Johnsen in the ninth and final game.

After Welsh took the opening game in the second set, Johnsen steadied, and displaying brilliant depth off both sides, he took the next six games, finishing off the set with a perfect overhead smash.

Johnsen Rallies

Johnsen, making use of an effective drop shot, won the opening game of the third set, but Welsh captured his own service, then broke through Johnsen's delivery to start a streak during which he ran out the set at 6—1, then took the first four games of the fourth set.

Exhibiting fine control, Welsh forced a steady stream of errors from his opponent's racket, breaking through Johnsen's first two service games, and holding his own service. Behind by four games, Johnsen steadied to break through Welsh's service and win his own, making it 4-2, but Welsh methodically continued to get everything back, and Johnsen's errors gave Welsh the set and the match.

Waited for Errors

Both men hit with good depth throughout the match, but with a few exceptions, neither attempted to rush the net after forcing shots.

Welsh scored three service aces to Johnsen's two, but Johnsen repeatedly double faulted at crucial points, and Welsh is not the type of player one can hand points to and still expect to beat.

Overhead Weak

Miss Gray playead steadier tennis than her opponent, who, although she did most of the forcing, failed to make good her overhead shots. Time after time Miss Decker advanced to the net, only to blow an easy kill.

A high wind hampered the players in both the men's and women's matches, but considering this obstacle to consistent play, the tennis was excellent.

Welsh returned to the court after a brief rest and teamed with Hugh Lynch to defeat Johnsen and Buddy Adair, 6—2, 6—1, 6—4, for the doubles crown.

Former Cub Manager

Jimmy Wilson Dies Of Heart Attack

Bradenton, Fla., June 1 (AP).—Fiery Jimmy Wilson, who spent 25 of his 47 years as manager, catcher and coach in the National League, died today of a heart attack.

Wilson was dining last night with friends at a sandwich shop, planning a swimming party in the Gulf of Mexico today, when he was stricken and fell unconscious.

* * * * * * * * *

JIMMY WILSON
. . . A Heart Attack

He was rushed to a hospital, where he was pronounced dead shortly after midnight.

He had been in apparent good health and had played golf yesterday afternoon.

Brief memorial services are planned by the Bradenton Masonic order tomorrow. The body will be shipped to Philadelphia for funeral services later in the week, and then returned to Bradenton for burial. Wilson was a native of Philadelphia.

He was a veteran of many World Series. After three years in the minors, with New Haven of the Eastern League, he began an uninterrupted career in the majors in 1923 as a catcher for the Philadelphia Phillies.

With Champions

In 1928 he was traded to St. Louis and played with the pennant-winning Cards of '28, '30, and '31. He was signed to manage the Phillies in 1934 and held the reins until 1939.

In 1940, as a coach for Cincinnate, he was a hero in the World Series. Wilson stepped in at the age of 40 to catch the last six games of the seven-game series with the Detroit Tigers. Regular Catcher Ernie Lombardi had been injured.

In the rubber game, he had the only perfect day at the plate of any player for either team in the series. In the same crucial contest, he was the only player to steal a base during the series. In the seventh inning, with the score tied 1-1, Wilson laid down a sacrifice which moved Jim Ripple to third and led to the run by which the Reds became world champions, 2-1.

Largely on the strength of his performance in the series, Wilson was signed to manage the Chicago Cubs. He guided the Windy City team until the middle of the 1943 season, when he returned to Cincinnati as coach.

Enters Business

At the end of the 1946 season, he retired from baseball and entered the citrus produce business here, where he had been a regular winter visitor for many years.

Survivors include his widow, Selina Edwards Wilson a daughter, Jane Isabel Wilson; two brothers, Andrew, Long Beach, Calif., and Robert, Bradenton; three sisters, Mrs. Lester Thomas, Philadelphia, Mrs. Walter Weisling, Philadelphia, and Mrs. Royal Schate, Kensington, Pa.

One son, Robert Wilson, was killed in the Pacific while on a B-29 bombing mission for the Army Air Forces.

Grays Split At Stadium

Taking the first game of a three-team double-header, 3-2, in 11 innings, from the champion Newark Eagles, the Washington Homestead Grays were downed in the second by the Philadelphia Stars, 8-3, yesterday at Griffith Stadium before 6000.

In the opener the visitors took the lead in the tenth inning when Harvey doubled to center and came home on Wynn's liner over second. But the Grays tied things up again when Marquez doubled to center, and Sam Bankhead poled a hit to short left, scoring him.

The game was won when Beal, Eagle pitcher, gave Easter a walk, and Thurman bunted to Beal, who threw wild to first allowing Easter to score standing up. Partlow was the winning pitcher for the Stars in the second game.

Brownell Beats Ewell For Title

Charlottesville, Va., June 1 (AP).—Bobby Brownell, 28-year-old Washington insurance safesman from Manor Country Club, methodically defeated little Dave Ewell, jr., of the Hermitage Country Club in Richmond, 6 and 5, today to win the forty-fourth renewal of the Middle Atlantic amateur golf championship.

Brownell, who had annexed the crown in 1941 at Hot Springs, Va., beat down Ewell just as swiftly and as surely as he had trounced three other scss in match play over the 6527-yard par 70 Farmington Country Club layout yesterday and this morning.

The 1941 captain of the Duke University golf team forged ahead on the fourth hole when he lifted his second shot from the rough to within 8 inches of the cup. Brownell then dropped it in for a par four. Ewell, meanwhile, fired a poor chip shot that rolled 10 feet beyond the cup and he had to be satisfied with a five.

Par out	434	443	544	—35
Brownell out	444	443	544	—36
Ewell out	444	554	554	—41
Par in	344	444	534	—35—70
Brownell in	344	4
Ewell in	454	4 (ended on 13th)

After the match, Brownell beamed: "I was lucky out there today. I guess it was my putting."

And Ewell came back: "Yea, it was my putting, too. Nope, I have no alibis—it wasn't tough luck, just poor golf."

Brownell seemed just as mechanical this afternoon as he appeared this morning when he advanced into the finals by eliminating Earle Skinker, representing the Columbia Country Club, Washington, 3 and 6.

Ewell, former Richmond city champion, who fought his way to the semifinals this year in the North-South Open at Pinehurst, had thrashed a fellow townsman, Frank Sutton, 3d, of the Country Club of Virginia, 5 and 4, to ride into the last round.

Brownell, who didn't beat par on any hole in downing Ewell, collected two birdies this morning in routing skinker. He grabbed the first three holes despite a bogey on the first, added the fifth with a birdie three and the sixth with a par three, and then won the eighth and ninth with par fours to make the turn 7 up and boasting a par 35 for the front side. Skinker had a 42.

Brownell won the tenth although he had a bogey four. On the eleventh, Skinker took advantage of Brownell's streak of wildness and won the only hole he took during the match. Brownell retaliated with his second birdie three of the match on the twelfth, where the end came.

SEMIFINAL RESULTS

Saddler Meets Carter

Jones Favored Over Handbury Tonight

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Herbie Jones makes his first start as a lightweight tonight at Griffith Stadium and he's a 7-5 favorite to mark his graduation from the featherweight school with a victory over Lew Hanbury.

It's strictly a neighborhood brawl involving two local boys. This 10 plus a cofeatured 10 rounder pitting New York's Joe Sandy Saddler, heir apparent to Willie Pep's featherweight title, against Jimmy Carter, another Ned York campaigner, top the Liberty A. C.'s first "bargain" show of the outdoor season.

Sonny Boy West, stablemate of Smuggy Hursey who stiffened Red Gaddis last week, tangles with clever Mickey Garcia in a special six which should be a corker. West, unable to box in the District until two weeks ago when he reached 18, is a highly touted featherweight who has been fighting main bouts in Baltimore recently and winning most of his excursions.

Hanbury, absent from Washington rings for over a year, won his last two New York starts after twice being stopped on the West Coast. The one-time District favorite is in the midst of another comeback and his handlers believe he has the guns to stop ambitious Jones.

The Biffer, a sharp-punching southpaw, had a hot indoor season at Turner's Arena, bowling over Jimmy McAllister, Pedro Firpo and Petey Virgin among others and is primed for tonight's test.

It could be that the winner of the Jones-Hanbury bout will be paired with Saddler, if he beats Carter, later in the summer. That's Goldie Ahearn's intentions at this writing.

Saddler is a classy campaigner with a great record—60 triumphs in 63 starts with 44 of them by kayos. He's an odds on favorite to dispose of Carter. Saddler is handled by Charlie Johnston, brother of the late colorful Jimmy.

Heavyweights Lindsey Womble and Georgie Jack open the card at 8:45 in a four; Lightweights Billy Unk and Morris Nelson clash in another four.

Halloran-Murray Post Wins Legion Game

Halloran-Murray scored seven runs in the last half of the final inning to defeat Bunker Hill, 7-6, yesterday in a Junior American Legion League contest.

Pitcher Ed Kline of the losers had a no-hit game going into the seventh inning, but four hits on top of some bases on balls and errors, turned the game into a nightmare for Kline. Dale Summerbell punched out a single to drive in the winning run.

War Department Plans Funds Appeal to Senate

Kluttz

WAR: As the House today was preparing to debate its bruised budget, War officials were drafting a strong appeal to the Senate for additional funds. The appeal will be aimed primarily at personnel restrictions recommended by the House Appropriations Committee.

In Washington, for example, it is contended that 16,000 civilian employes are an irreducible minimum. The committee would cut the number to 13,000. More than 17,000 are now on the job. The committee would cut War's total civilian strength by about 75,000.

If the new cut goes through, it is reported, tens of thousands of soldiers would be placed in the jobs now held by civilians. Even with its present civilian staff, upwards of 25,000 soldiers have been assigned to civilian jobs during the past several months. And the net cost of a soldier is considerably more than a civilian.

Meantime, War officials are at sixes and sevens over how, and when, the threatened new discharges are to be made. A majority want to get out provisional notices now to become effective on June 30. But this isn't possible by that time under the present system which requires 30 days notice to laid-off employes. Civil Service has rejected a plea that the time period be cut to 15 days. Instead, it has suggested legislation which would permit War and all other Federal agencies to pay 1947 terminal leave costs out of 1947 appropriations. If Congress agrees, the pressure will be taken off the department.

NAVY: A survey of wages paid its per diem employes has been formally ordered by Secretary Forrestal. As revealed here two weeks ago, the study is likely to result in higher salaries for many of its 200,000 per diems of whom about 15,000 are in the Washington area. The survey is to begin on July 1.

NOTES: The Labor Department now has layoff notices out to 1900 of its 7000 employes . . . the Council of Economic Advisers has a new report ready for the President . . . Federal Public Housing has cut its staff here from 950 to 865 in recent weeks . . . Leon Hammond retires today from Fort Myer where he has been employed for 25 years. He was its purchasing and contract officer.

VA: Its regional office is going in for employe crackdowns in a big way. A recent order directed that no rest period was to be established or observed for employe, and that anyone caught resting was to be reported.

A second directive said that the employes must be at their desks and prepared for work at 8 a. m. or else they'd be counted absent. It emphasized that the girls have a habit of going into the rest rooms for extensive makeup after they report for work. And it warned them to discontinue the practice.

Time clerks will check employes in and out for lunch. The order also forbids any eating or drinking during working hours. As one old employe recalled: "General Hines was never that tough."

PERMANENTS: Civil Service is still mulling over its proposed new program to give permanents and veterans additional job preference rights. Something probably will be done on paper, but no one is too sure how it will work.

The entire program is based on the forced firings of temporaries and war service people and the hiring of displaced permanents and veterans in their places. It's the sort of thing that demands the closer possible cooperation of the many agencies with Civil Service. To date, Civil Service hasn't been given the help it needs to make the program effective.

CIVIL SERVICE NOTES: An exam for intelligence specialists has been announced. Starting salaries range from $7102 to $9975 a year. A new test for personal counselors to fill vacancies in Veterans Administration is also open. The jobs pay $4902 . . . An exam for radio engineers to fill openings in Federal Communications will be announced soon. Another coming test is one for mathematicians, $3397 to $5905.

STOP: Federal agencies will be told this week that beginning next Monday they can no longer make temporary appointments to these jobs:

Junior professional assistant with the exception of metallurgist and textile technologist, guard, patrolman, patent examiner, accountant, auditor, printer proofreader and library assistant. Civil Service has lists of eligibles for these jobs resulting from recent competitive tests.

The commission also has eligibles for research psychologist and administrative officer.

In the Washington area, 1900 persons were rated eligible on the junior professional assistant test as follows: economist, 800; statistician, 500; archivist, 220; mathematician, 200; chemist, 325; physicist, 100; geographer, 100; metallurgist, 10; and textile technologist, 4. About 1100 of the eligibles are veterans.

All the 5000 eligibles in the guard and patrolmen exam are veterans.

Methodists Announce New Pulpit Occupants

Changes in D. C., Nearby Churches Are Disclosed By Bishop Flint

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Reporter

New pulpit assignments for a number of District area Methodist churches were announced last night by Bishop Charles Wesley Flint, resident prelate of the Washington area. They are effective immediately.

Bishop Flint made the assignments at closing sessions of the Baltimore Annual Conference at Western Maryland College, Westminster, Md. The Washington area includes the Baltimore Conference and the Central Pennsylvania and Peninsula Conferences. District and nearby Maryland churches are included in the Baltimore Conference.

Heading the list of assignments was the selection of the Rev. Fred C. Reynolds, superintendent of the Baltimore South District, as new superintendent of the Washington East District.

Succeeds Dr. Cromer

The Rev. Mr. Reynolds will succeed Dr. Horace E. Cromer, whose six-year superintendency term expired at this conference. Dr. Cromer became pastor of McKendree Church, Rhode Island and South Dakota aves. ne. The Rev. Charles F. Phillips, minister of McKendree Church, became successor to the Rev. Mr. Reynolds as Baltimore South District superintendent.

Superintendent Reynolds was a chaplain in World Wars I and II, and from 1924 to 1929 was pastor of Wesley Methodist Church, Connecticut ave. and Jocelyn sts. nw. He began his ministry in 1910 as pastor of the East Harford (Md.) Circuit of the Baltimore Conference of the former Methodict Episcopal denomination.

He was post chaplain at Fort Meade.

The Rev. Mr. Phillips has been minister of McKendree Church since 1941, and was pastor of St. Paul's Methodist Church, 13th and Crittenden sts. nw., from 1938 to 1940. Before Methodist Unification in April, 1939, he was affiliated with the Methodist Protestant body, which merged with the Methodist Episcopal and Methodist, South, bodies into the United Church.

Three in Row

He was slated to become superintendent of the Washington East District. However, conference officials explained that such a selection would mean three successive former Southern Methodist ministers in that position. Thus, he Rev. Mr. Reynolds, a minister of the Methodist Episcopal body before unification, was chosen to come here.

Dr. Fred G. Holloway, president of Western Maryland College, and a clergyman of the Baltimore Conference, becomes new dean of Drew Theological Seminary, Madison, N. J. He will succeed Dr. Lynn Harold Hough, who is retiring at Drew. Dr. Halloway is well known in the District. He was pastor of Cherrydale Church from 1929 to 1933, when that congregation was in the Methodist Protestant denomination.

The Rev. W. Arnem Roberts, pastor of Baltimore's Memorial Church, comes to Rhode Island Avenue Methodist Church 1st st. and Rhode Island ave. nw., as successor to Dr. Edgar A. Sexsmith, who has reached the retirement age of 72. Dr. Sexsmith has been a Methodist minister 47 years and was a leader in the former Methodist Protestant body.

Mr. Poore Retires

The Rev. Allan F. Poore, pastor of Wilson Memorial Methodist Church, 756 11th st. se., who retired because of disability, will be succeeded by the Rev. H. H. Hoyt of Lanham, Md.

The Rev. George H. Bennett was transferred from Lincoln Road Church, Rhode Island ave. and U st. ne., to the Brunswick, Md., charge. The Rev. Robert K. Nevitt goes from Brightwood Park Church, 8th and Jefferson sts. nw., to Lincoln Road Church. The Rev. Thomas B. Ehlers, pastor of Forestville (Md.) Church, becomes new minister of Brightwood Church. The Rev. Thomas H. Baker of the Friendship (Md.) charge, goes to Forestville.

The Rev. Clarence E. Wise moves from Wesley Church, Connecticut ave. and Jocelyn sts. nw. to Lewis Memorial Church, 4th and Hamilton sts, nw. The Rev. C. Custer Cromwell goes from Lewis Church to First Church, Towson, Md.

New pastor of Wesley Church is the Rev. C. Stanley Lowell, 37 year-old minister of the Wesley Church, Dover, Delaware.

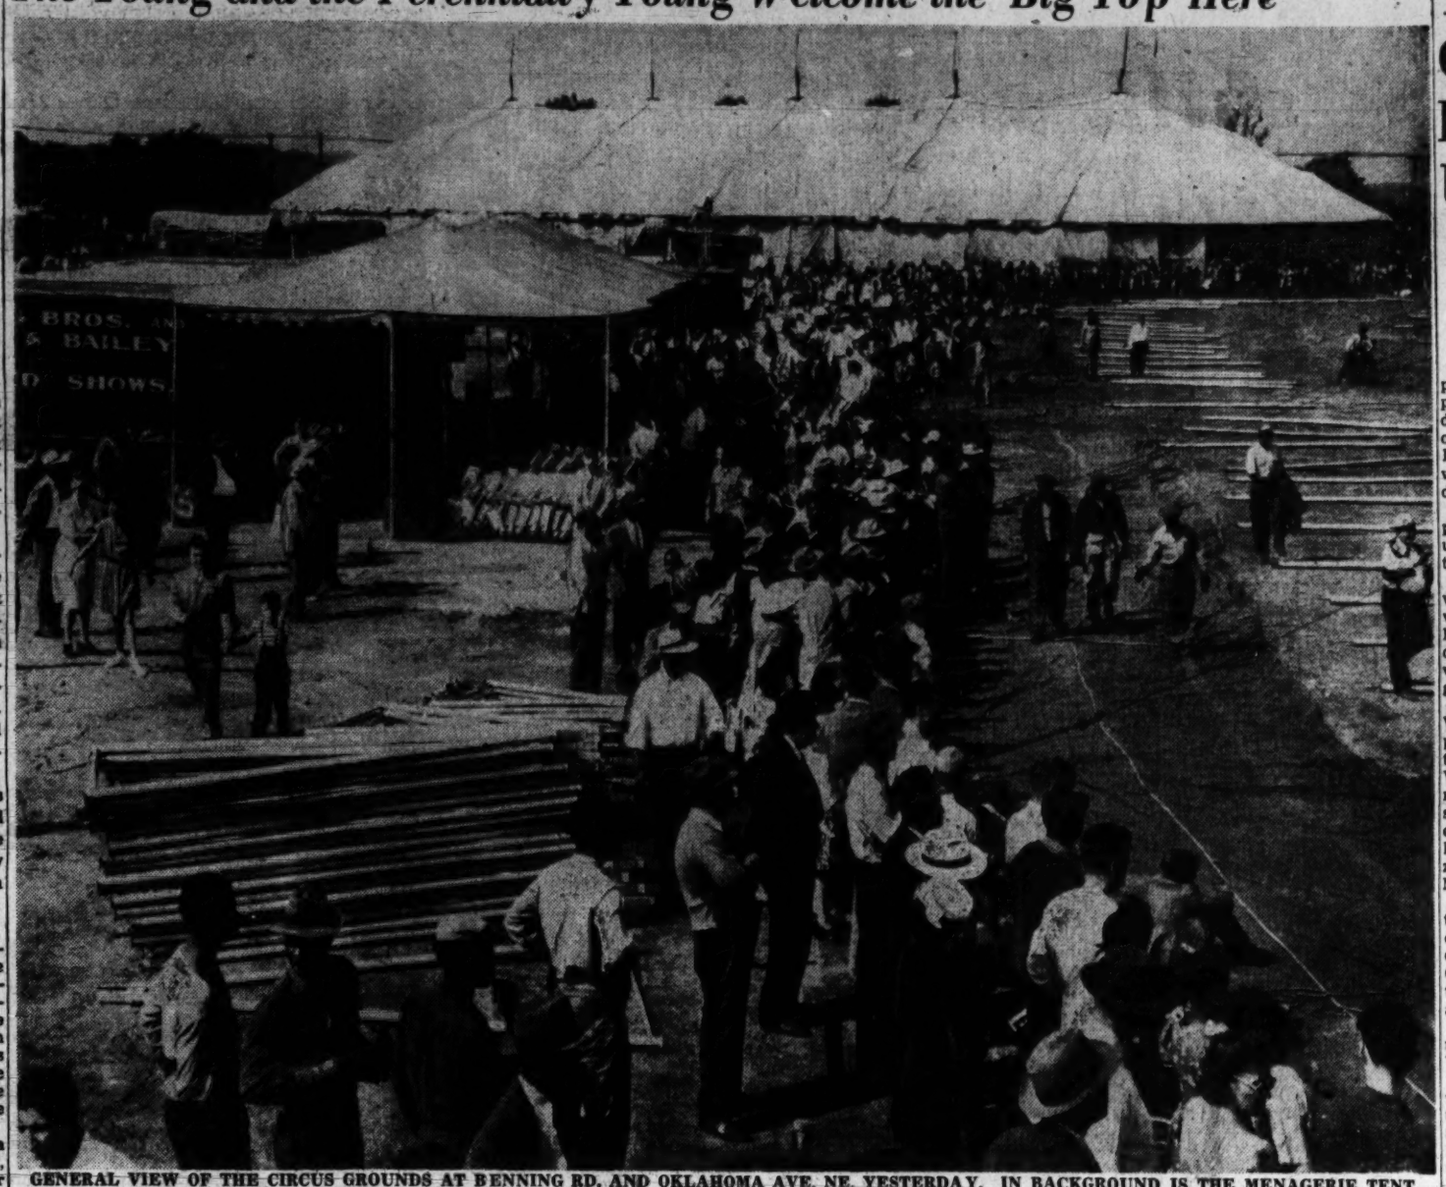
Was Navy Chaplain

The Rev. Lowell was a chaplain in the Naval Reserve in World War II. He was pastor of the Tamiami Temple at Miami, Fla., from 1936 to 1940, when Bishop Flint—then Bishop of the Atlanta area, attended his church. The Rev. Lowell was a classmate of the Rev. George Y. Flint, the bishop's son, at Yale Divinity School.

The new minister at Wesley Church also was educated at Duke University and Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky. He is a native of Hastings, Nebr. He and Mrs. Lowell have two children—Marilyn, 6, and Dean Stanley, 4.

The Rev. Lowell is transferring from the Peninsula Conference.

The Young and the Perennially Young Welcome the 'Big Top' Here



GENERAL VIEW OF THE CIRCUS GROUNDS AT BENNING RD. AND OKLAHOMA AVE. NE. YESTERDAY. IN BACKGROUND IS THE MENAGERIE TENT. AT RIGHT, A "CANVAS BOSS" SUPERVISES ERECTION OF THE MAIN TENT. TEN THOUSAND WERE ON HAND FOR THE ARRIVAL.

10,000 Watch Circus Unload

the work-a-day part of the circus in action.

Things will be quite different at the circus at 2:15 p. m., when the first show starts. By then there will be sawdust strewn around to hide the dirt and keep the dust down. The tents will shade off the sun, if there is any.

The ringmaster will crack his whip, and it will be "Ladeez and gentlemen—the Greatest Show on Earth." But yesterday, in the eyes of the youngsters, anyhow, the greatest show on earth already was under way.

Kids Follow Elephants

The kids gathered wherever the elephants went, pulling and tugging away at the 70-foot circus tent poles. They watched the working caterpillar diesel tractors yank trucks this way and that. They watched sweating roustabouts chant something that sounded like "veeve—veeve—veeve" as they moved in concerted action about the tent stakes.

They stood for a long time before the wagons which housed polar bears, panting in the heat. They watched a black panther, which sullenly watched them back. Most of the animal cages were closed yesterday as the circus underpinnings got established.

Today there will be more animals to see—camels, dromedaries, Hindu burros, llamas and zebras, rhinoceri, the world-famous gorillas Gargantua and Toto, giraffes, monkeys. There will be educated bears and trained horses and college-bred chimpanzees.

Long Wait for Trains

And there will be clowns—100 of them: "the omnilucent emissaries of unmitigated mirth-quake." There will be acts with people, to make young and old alike go "Oooh," or "Aaah."

Yesterday, all you could see was wild but organized confusion. Those who came early when they heard the circus planned to unload at 9 a. m. had a long, dusty morning to wait before most of the trains came in.

One train got in early, but three others were held up by a split track at Evergreen, Md. It was almost 3 o'clock before the bulk of the circus equipment—and performers, checked in at the Benning railroad yards.

Tents Flameproofed

And by late afternoon, all that was visible of the splendor that is the Big Top was raised into place by the combined efforts of elephants, tractors and roustabouts.

The smaller tents mushroomed up earlier, and more effortlessly. All the tents this year are flameproof. All the wooden planking in the tent is chemically treated to guard against fires. The understructure of the seats is steel.

As the tents went up, the myriad stands which dispense "Ice cold pink lemonade, cotto candy, get it right here folks"—or 'Hot dogs here, hot dogs and soda pop"—or 'This way for your ice cream," prepared to go into business again.

On Saturday night they will go "on the road" again. They'll fold up the Greatest Show on Earth here after the Saturday night performance, and on Sunday will break it out again in Baltimore.

And between now and then, Washingtonians who are young in heart, be they 6 or 60, will get a chance at The Big Show—"You can't see it all with one pair of eyes."

City News in Brief

Georgetown Channel Canoes Endangered by Speedboat

It was rough canoeing on the Potomac yesterday about 6:30 p. m.

And harbor police are looking for the cause: A speeding motor boat with three youths aboard who created such a wake in the Georgetown Channel several canoes were almost upset.

Speed limit in the channel at the part where the wash-creating boat was reported is six miles an hour, the police said.

Young men and their girl friends were in several of the canoes—and rough riding with a girl friend in a canoe isn't very romantic, the men told police.

Bicyclist Severely Hurt

Charles C. Beach, 13, of 2848 Vista st. ne., was severely injured yesterday afternoon, when his bicycle crashed into a parked car just after he rounded the corner of 27th and Hamlin sts. ne. The boy was admitted to Sibley Hospital with a severe cut to the upper part of his right arm.

Kick Injures Woman's Eye

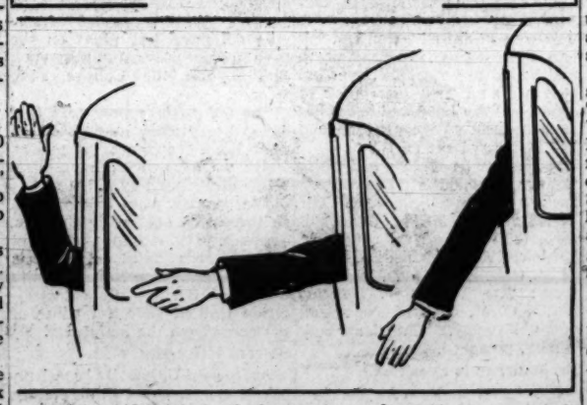
Mary Lee Burrows, 31, of Falls Church, Va., received a serious eye injury early yesterday when she was kicked in the face during an altercation at 801 L st. nw. She was admitted to Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital. A 37-year-old man was arrested by police and held on an open charge pending the outcome of her injuries.

Loses $180 on Street

Klate Holt, manager of the Toddle House, 5314 Georgia ave. nw., told police he lost $180 in cash shortly after noon yesterday while he was en route from a delicatessen at 5756 Georgia ave. nw. to the Toddle House. The money was the property of the Toddle House, he said.

The Post Poll

Few Use Auto Hand Signals Although 90% Know of Them



Official signals for turning and stopping

Ninety per cent of District drivers have heard about the new regulations governing traffic hand signals, the Post Poll finds.

But a half-hour spot check at 14th and K sts. nw. Saturday revealed that 90 per cent of the motorists making right turns and 79 per cent of drivers making left turns did so without giving hand signals.

Out of 80 drivers who made right turns, 72 of them gave no signals. Thirty-eight of the 49 motorists making left turns also omitted signals.

Asked his impression of the apparent lack of use of the new hand signals, George E. Keneipp, Director of Traffic and Vehicles, declared that "it was strictly a matter of enforcement.

"I recommended the standard signals," Keneipp said, "and I believe there should be strict enforcement of them as well as strict enforcement of every traffic regulation we have."

On April 1, the following hand signals became law: Arm up indicates right turn arm horizontal indicates left turn and arm down indicates stop. These new regulations make District hand signals conform to those used in Virginia and Maryland suburbs.

Asked to describe the new signals, 25 per cent of the drivers failed to give the correct signal for "Stop"; 22 per cent did not know the signal for "Left Turn"; and 18 per cent did not give the correct signal for "Right Turn."

These findings of The Post Poll are based on personal interviews with a representative cross-section of District drivers.

District drivers were asked:

"Have you heard about the new hand signals which will become (became) law on April 1?"

Answers were divided as follows:

Had heard about new hand signals 90%
Had not heard about them 10

Those who had heard about the change in regulations were asked:

"Can you tell me what the new signal for right turn is? How about left turn? How about the signal for stop?"

Signal	Of All Ditrict Drivers Per cent Correct	Per cent Incorrect or Uninformed
Right turn	82%	18%
Stop	75	25

Gunman Held After Firing Shot at Enemy

Both Were Members Of Depression-Days Gangs, Police Say

A member of the notorious old "Tri-State Gang" was arrested late last night after he allegedly tried to "bump off" another gangster of depression days in downtown Washington.

Police identified the assailant at First Precinct station house as John Kendrick, about 40, who reportedly admitted trying to shoot Tommy English, 34, whose address was given as 832 10th st. nw.

Kendrick waited for English in an automobile near English's house, police said. He fired one shot, but missed, as English came out of his house. The bullet pierced the window of a beauty salon at 830 10th st. nw.

Fled in Car

Kendrick's gun jammed, it was said, and he fled in his car. At 11th and M sts. nw., he sideswiped a truck, continued on, then abandoned the vehicle at 13th and M sts. He was picked up by Scout Car 131 at 14th and Swann sts. nw. shortly after. The shooting occurred at 11 p. m.

The gun Kendrick allegedly used—a Luger—was found in his abandoned automobile with one shot fired.

Kendrick's record shows that he shot a Washington policeman, Thomas Bacon, about 15 years ago. While serving 10 years at Lorton Reformatory, he escaped. It was following his escape and the escape of others from Lorton that the tri-State gang hit its stride in a year-long wave of large-scale robbery and murder extending over Virginia, Maryland and West Virginia.

Record of Escapes

English, described as a "jailbreak" artist," was once a member of a gang almost equally notorious—the "Blackface Gang." In 1932 he was sentenced to Lorton for housebreaking and larceny and in 1935 convicted of robbery. He has a long record of escapes.

Both Kendrick and English have been picked up by police within the last 10 months. Last September, Kendrick was questioned in connection with the case of a young woman found unconscious in her apartment. English was arrested September 30 on an attempted safe-cracking job.

Four Injured When Autos Crash Head-on

Man Charged With Reckless Driving on Wrong Side of Road

Four persons were injured in a head-on crash yesterday in the 10,000 block of Georgia ave., Silver Spring, Md.

A car which police said was operated by Joseph Hazel Brown, 27, of Silver Spring, collided head-on with a car operated by Robert T. Jones, 21, of Viers Mill rd., Rockville, Md.

Police said the Brown car was passing a line of cars and was on the wrong side of the road at the time.

Brown was cut on the face and hands and Jones was cut on the the face. Betty Jean Jones, 21, of Rockville, a pasenger in Jones'car, was cut on the chin and face, and Martha Johnson, 22, of Linden, Md., who was riding with Brown, suffered a knee injury. All were treated at the scene by the Kensington Volunteer Fire Department rescue squad.

Brown was charged with reckless driving. Trial was set for tomorrow at Silver Spring Police Court.

Transit Firm Employes Ask Pay Increase

Capital Transit Co. employes have presented new contract demands, union officials revealed yesterday.

According to an informed source, the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes, Local 689, has asked for six days pay for five days' work, among other things.

W. E. Simms, president of the local, said the current contract expires June 30. The 1946 contract established wage rates at $1.20 an hour.

The present agreement, according to Simms, provides for arbitratoin in the event negotiators cannot come to terms on disputed issues.

E. D. Merrill, company president, said he expects negotiations to get under way within 10 days. An estimated 4300 workers, about 2700 of them drivers, are covered by the contract.

Pepper to Share Platform With Wallace June 16

Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) is slated to share the speaker's platform with Henry Wallace when the former Secretary of Commerce speaks at the Watergate June 16.

This was announced last night by the Southern Conference for Human Welfare which is sponsoring Wallace's first major public address here since his resignation from the Truman Cabinet.

Dr. Clark Foreman, national president of the Southern Conference, and Zero Mostel, satirist of stage and radio, also will speak. Mrs. Gertrude Rodman, special events chairman of the conference's Washington Committee, said.

Telephone Groups Split In Reforming Union Front

200,000 Workers Moving Toward CIO Tie; Others Forming Own Unit

Leaders of some 200,000 telephone workers were completing plans for a mass consolidation under the CIO yesterday, even as other powerful communications labor elements were looking forward to the birth of their own independent organization next week.

The two groups, as they appeared to line up in the race for unifying the strike-torn ranks of telephone employes, are:

1. The provisional telephone workers' organizing committee, which closed a two-day session in Philadelphia last night under the chairmanship of Allen S. Haywood, vice president and director of organization for the CIO.

2. The new Communications Workers of America, which is expected to replace formally the National Federation of Telephone Workers, which spearheaded the recent strike under President Joseph Beirne. About 20 of NFTW's original 49 affiliates are said to have paid dues in the new organization, which meets in Miami next Monday.

At the Philadelphia session, 43 telephone workers representing 19 employe groups participated in discussions on affiliation with the CIO and were to report back to their groups for possible further action.

Haywood said the TWOC will set up its provisional headquarters in Washington.

The CIO already has under its wing three international unions that include telephone workers. Still others belong to the AFL's International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Among the unions represented at Philadelphia yesterday was the 20,000-member American Union of Telephone Workers, which last week withdrew from the dying NFTW and the new CWA and announced it would throw in with the CIO. Its president, John J. Moran of Pittsburgh, told reporters in Philadelphia:

"There is no hope for isolation among the telephone workers."

Moran was perhaps the most vehement of internal critics who hit at Beirne's "bungling" in leading NFTW's 300,000 members in the Nation-wide strike.

Beirne, meanwhile, has expressed certainty that the CWA "will become a going concern at Miami." He denounced Moran's shift of allegiance to the CIO as "foolhardy" and charged that the CIO had been "waiting to catch us over a barrel at the right angle."

Represented at the Philadelphia meeting were unions from the District of Columbia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Oregon, New York, Delaware, Georgia, Illinois, Michigan, North Carolina, Wisconsin and New Jersey.

Army to Hold Conference On Medicine

Latest developments in the field of medicine and Army medical practices will form the basis of a three-day symposium to be held at the Army Medical Center at Walter Reed Hospital, starting at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

About 750 leading members of the medical profession are expected to attend the conference at which outstanding former and present Army doctors will lecture. The symposium is sponsored by the Army Medical Department.

At tomorrow morning's session, the welcoming address will be delivered by Brig. Gen. George C. Beach, jr., commanding general of the Army Medical Center. Lectures on "Summary of U. S. Army Experiences With Streptomycin" and 'Medical Aspects of the Atomic Bomb" will follow.

At the afternoon session at 2 o'clock lectures will be delivered on "The Newer Concepts of Amputations and Prostheses," "Results of 100 Cases of Plastic Surgery," and "Recent Advances in the Treatment of Lung Abscess."

Topics to be discussed at Wednesday and Thursday sessions include the latest developments in malaria therapy, use of streptomycin in the treatment of tuberculosis, research in virus diseases, and psychotherapy.

Wednesday's session will be climaxed by a banquet at 8 p. m. at the Washington Hotel at which Dr. Paul R. Hawley, Veterans' Administration chief medical director, will be the speaker.

The symposium will close Thursday afternoon following a discussion of "The Federal Contribution to the Health and Welfare of the Nation" by Senator James E. Murray (D., Mont.).

Cathedral Dedicates Physician's Window

Doctors and Clergy Must Work Closely, Says Dr. Sladen

A call for teamwork between physicians and clergymen in building a better world came yesterday from Dr. Frank J. Sladen, physician in chief of Detroit's Henry Ford Hospital.

More than 800 persons heard Dr. Sladen speak at the dedication of the physician's window in the Washington Cathedral's North Transept. It gas given in memory of Dr. Elmer Burkitt Freeman by his widow, Rosa Freeman. He was a leading Baltimore surgeon and physician.

"A normal personality is the basis for healthy living," said Dr. Sladen. "That is where the doctor and the clergyman must have team work."

Dr. Angus Dun, Bishop of the Washington Episcopal Diocese, dedicated the window. The central figure is of Christ as "The Great Healer." The other two figures are of Louis Pasteur and Dr. Wilfred Grenfell, famous Labrador physician.

Land of Fulfillment

America represents the fulfillment of the hopes of mankind, the Rev. Ward Hurlburt said at Brookland Baptist Church, 16th and Monroe sts. ne.

"The fulfillment of the promises of America was the culmination of a dream that men had held in their hearts and minds for centuries—the hope for a nation of the people, by the people and for the people," he said.

He said, furthermore, that Jesus represented the fulfillment of the promises that God made to Abraham, and of which Christians are the spiritual inheritors.

Sturdy Faith Urged

The need of a sturdy faith in God in facing life's handicaps was stressed by Dr. Graham Gordon Lacy in his sermon last night at Central Presbyterian Church, 15th and Irving sts. nw.

He pointed out that a person needs faith in God, in his fellow men and in himself, but said it was most important to have faith in God. He spoke on Life's Hurdles." The congregation will tender Dr. Lacy, the new pastor, and his family a reception Wednesday at 8 p. m. in the social hall.

After 34 Years

U. S. Loses Suit Over Filled Land

The Federal Government has lost a 34-year-old legal fight for ownership of land filled in on the Anacostia River at the foot of South Capitol st.

Judge F. Dickinson Letts of District Court has ruled that the land filled out into the water—in an area bounded by Water, S and T sts. sw., belongs to James and Lottie Martin of 3401 R st. nw. and the Smoot Sand and Gravel Co., not the Government.

Started in 1913

The judge ruled a property owner has ownership of and title to land he has filled out to the bulkhead line. He may encumber (mortgage) it and convey (deed) it like any other land. He also is liable to taxes on such filled-in land.

Bulkhead line is that water line drawn by the Secretary of War beyond which land may not be filled in without War Department authorization. The case in question involved land filled out to but not beyond the bulkhead line.

History of the case dates back to 1913 when the Government originally filed suit.

Dust-covered evidence unearthed by both sides trailed off into the distant past—to the charter by which King Charles I of England granted Maryland to Lord Baltimore—in 1632.

Daniel Partridge, attorney for the Martins and the Smoot Co., introduced as one key exhibit a map, drawn between 1795 and 1797, by James Dermott and approved by George Washington. Partridge claimed the map showed S. Capitol st. stopped at the north line of S st. The judge so held.

Washington's waterfront is largely in Government hands today. The Government for three and a half decades has sought to control it to jibe with long-range plans for the city.

Much filled-in land was filled under Government reclamation projects. However, in several sections land fronting on the Anacostia, particularly in the southwest, is still in question. Judge Letts' decision may serve as a precedent for settling these ownership issues.

Robert McLeod represented the Department of Justice in court.

Conference Set

Judge Letts, after delivering his opinion announced a conference would be held with attorneys for both sides.

It is understood the conference will involve questions of how the value of the land shall be ascertained and reported to Congress under the 1912 act of Congress.

That act under which the Government instituted its suit, was passed to clarify title to land of questionable ownership along the Anacostia.

To get the land now, the Government will either have to buy it through agreement with the owners or through condemnation proceedings under the right of eminent domain.

Baccalaureate Rites at Maryland Institutions

AT NAVAL ACADEMY—Graduating first classmen and their families join in singing the opening hymn as the brigade flag and the National Colors approach the altar of the Academy chapel. Chaplain E. P. Wuebbens, USN, was speaker at the ceremony

AT UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND—Members of the graduating class descend the steps of the Administration Building to join the faculty group leading the procession to the outdoor scene of the traditional baccalaureate sermon which opened a full June week at the university yesterday. Baccalaureate Rites Draw Thousands in District Area

Baccalaureate exercises drew thousands of friends and relatives yesterday to District area colleges.

There were baccalaureate rites for seniors of American and Maryland Universities; the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis; Trinity College, Chevy Chase Junior College and other institutions.

Rear Admiral William N. Thomas, Navy Chief of Chaplains, urged American University seniors to use spiritual resources in shaping their lives.

"Life is a connection between ourselves and the influences that are bigger than ourselves," the chaplain said at baccalaureate rites at Metropolitan Memorial Church. Honorary degrees will be conferred at commencement today at 8:30 p. m. on the steps of Hurst Hall on the campus.

Annapolis' Baccalaureate

Meanwhile, 500 first classmen at the Naval Academy, where Admiral Thomas was once head chaplain, heard a baccalaureate address by Chaplain E. P. Wuebbens, of the Navy Chief of Chaplain's Office.

"If there is one thing the educated man of 1947 is sure of, it is that we are not the superior beings we thought we were," said Chaplain Wuebbens. "The world is not your apple and you know it. The only baccalaureate promise that everything will work out simply because you are educated and scientific or because you are sincere and intend to work hard, does not convince you. That foundation of sand has been tried and great has been the fall of every nation and life that was built on it."

A class of 95 seniors of Trinity College attended a baccalaureate mass in the chapel yesterday. The Most Rev. John M. McNamara, administrator of the Washington and Baltimore Archdioceses and pastor of St. Gabriel's Church, was celebrant. The Very Rev. Ignatius Smith, O. P., dean of the school of philosophy, Catholic University, preached.

Dr. Mahoney to Speak

Two honor students for the class of '47 are Patricia Hayden of Chevy Chase, magna cum laude, and Marie Byrne of Lexington, Ky., cum laude. Principal speaker at commencement exercises today at 11 a. m. in Trinity College auditorium will be Dr. Robert Mahoney, director of secular education for the city of Hartford, Conn. He is a Catholic layman.

The need of dignity and integrity in achieving social ideals was stressed by Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer in addressing baccalaureate rites of Chevy Chase Junior College at Chevy Chase Methodist Church.

Dr. Buschmeyer, pastor of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, reminded his listeners of the world of uncertainties they face, and urged them not to lose their spiritual idealism. Graduation exercises are set today at 10 a. m. at Chevy Chase Methodist Church.

Baccalaureate ceremonies for Marjorie Webster Junior College were held last night at New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. Dr. Peter Marshall, host pastor and Senate chaplain, preached. Commencement will be Saturday at 11 a. m. on the campus at 7775 17th st. nw.

Maryland U. Services

"We do not find life worth living, we must make it worth living," members of the University of Maryland graduation class were told by Dr. Edward G. Latch of the Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church, in his baccalaureate sermon delivered last night on the lawn in front of the Administration Building on the College Park campus.

The 955 seniors were told that "what life does to us depends on what life finds in us, the visions which we have and the purposes which direct our way."

The services were opened with an invocation offered by the Rev. James B. Orth, student minister of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, College Park. The Rev. W. Keith Custis of the Riverdale Presbyterian Church gave a reading of sentences from the Scriptures.

Howard University

At Howard University baccalaureate services, about 5000 persons heard President Mordecai Johnson declare that communism can be a "most wholesome" challenge to American democracy.

Baccalaureate services were held on the campus, in front of Frederick Douglass Hall. More than 500 students are candidates for degrees.

"It is a good thing for American democracy," Dr. Johnson observed, "that communism which exists in Russia and is making its way down through Europe, is a challenge to democracy in all phases of life. For the first time in 400 years, we are face to face with a people who, when we say they are worse than we, answer by calling on us to lay our cards on the table.

Dr. Hardee Chambliss, 74, Research Chemist, Dies Here

Hardee Chambliss, 74, former dean of the Catholic University School of Science and a nationally known research chemist, died yesterday afternoon at Doctors Hospital.

Dr. Chambliss, who played a leading role in America's nitrate production program during World War I, was stricken at his home, 7701 Eastern ave., Takoma Park, Md., and died shortly after at the hospital.

He was the grandson of Lieut. Gen. William Joseph Hardee, famed Confederate Army officer who wrote Hardee's Tactics, a standard infantry manual, and who once commanded West Point. His father, Nathaniel Rives Chambliss, was a Confederate Army colonel.

Graduate of VMI

His own military career started with his graduation from Virginia Military Institute in 1894 and was climaxed in 1918 when, as an Army major, he was put in charge of all nitrate research work for the Ordnance Department. At the time of his death, he held a reserve colonelcy.

Born in Selma, Ala., Dr. Chambliss received his M.S. from Vanderbilt University in 1899 and his Ph.D. from Johns Hopkins a year later. Between 1900 and 1917 he held a teaching post in chemistry at Columbia University, was a professor at Oklahoma A. and M., and was research chemist with several industrial firms.

In 1921, he resigned as civilian manager of United States nitrate plant No. 1, Sheffield, Ala., which he also headed as an Army officer earlier, to accept a chemistry professorship at Catholic University. Three years later he became dean of the School of Science, a post he held for 10 years.

In 1938 he resigned his chair and since then had taught at Columbus University and the Department of Agriculture. He was still active in geo-chemistry research when he died.

Funeral Services Wednesday

Among organizations he belonged to are the American Chemical Society, American Institute of Chemical Engineers, American Association of Engineers, Society of Chemical Industry and the Chemical Society (London).

He also was a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon and the Knights of Columbus, and once belonged to the Torch Club and the Aztec Society.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Emma H. Chambliss; four sons, Joseph Hardee Chambliss, Vienna, Va.; John Lockwood Chambliss, Falls Church, Va.; Hardee Chambliss, jr., Alan McLane Francis Chambliss, San Anselmo, Calif., and a sister, Mrs. James W. Johnson, Bronxville, N. Y.

Funeral services will be held at Catholic University Wednesday, with burial in Arlington National Cemetery. No time has been set.

Klotz and the brother of Harry W. Klotz, who at the time of his death in 1940 was the senior assistant postmaster of Washington, and of Walter R. Klotz, former Veterans Bureau auditor, who died in 1942.

He entered the Navy Yard at the age of 15 and retired in 1944, after having served 10 years as supervisor in the optical shop. During his service there he was twice rewarded for meritorious service by the then Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 28, Engaged to Bachelor Boss, 40, Sees Beautiful Matron, Old Family Friend Of His, As a Determined Rival; Asks Help

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am engaged to a man for whom I work. He is a bachelor, 40, and I am 28. He is a wonderful person and a fine character. Through all his years of bachelorhood he has lived at home with his mother and two married sisters, one a widow, and naturally he is very friendly with their married friends.

I am somewhat disturbed by one such friendship with a very beautiful woman, two or three years older than I. Although she and her husband occupy the same house, they are as far apart as the poles. A sickly child has kept them together, but I know there will be a divorce at the first opportunity.

My fiance is very friendly with both husband and wife, having known them since they were first married. Very often the three of them go out together. Incidentally, though I've mentioned the child, I believe it's also true to say that my fiance's mediation has helped keep them together thus far. He has always hoped they would patch up their troubles.

Rival Is Always Kissing the Man

I KNOW this woman is very fond of my fiance and would jump at the chance to marry him. Whenever she is anywhere near the office, whether alone or with his sister, she drops in and gives him a greeting kiss—as is done at his home, too. I haven't said anything, because of her close friendship with the whole family; but every-time this happens, I am cool to my fiance.

I guess he can't understand what he has done to make me feel that way; and I know he is too grand a person to marry me if he had serious thoughts about her. However, I just can't help my reaction and I am worried about what my future feelings will be—knowing his family's friendliness to her.

I can't be childish and sulk all the time; yet I can't believe they don't see through her acting. I certainly won't try to break up a friendship that existed before I came into the family. I know if I said anything to him, he would laugh and in all probability see that she didn't come to the office anymore; or to our home either, I imagine.

We plan to be married in a couple of months, as soon as I break in a new girl. Our engagement is only a month old. What would you advise? E. L.

Rival Is Busy At Dirty Work

DEAR E. L.: The beautiful matron's effusive kissing of your fiance nowadays, as often as she can manage under your nose, isn't so much expressive of fond affection as it is just plain dirty work at the crossroads.

This isn't old family friendship in full bloom. It's a business of sticking a knife into you—or trying to. She means to hurt. She is playing woman at her worst, trying to spoil things for you and your fiance.

Your sulky reaction, beamed at him, is just what she wants. She is trying to gouge you into a performance that will smack of jealous cat—hoping he will see you in that light. Also, she'd adore an opening wedge for delicately clawing you to pieces, conversationally, with his family. She is trying to maneuver you into a series of false moves, as a build-up to that.

It's a pretty safe bet that for years she has been trading adroitly on her family-crony rating to play on his sympathies about her difficulties with her husband—using this oldest of married flirt rackets to get under his guard.

Fading Angle Of Triangle?

THERE IS MORE to her ubiquitous affectional familiarity with him, and his fraternal tolerance of it, than appears on the surface. I daresay he was once somewhat smitten with her, or on the verge of being so. Perhaps there was a time when the makings of a triangle existed—in her mind and his imagination.

I believe you're right in assuming she would jump at the chance to marry him. I judge she's been tenaciously aiming at that objective for years, and that she hasn't given up, even yet, despite his getting engaged to you and despite her awareness—I'm sure she has it—that she never quite succeeded in "alerting" his emotions; that his tentative infatuation passed off like a touch of fever quickly receding.

I suppose he wants you as wife for a blend of reasons: 1. Because he loves you; finds your society both tonic and restful, exactly to his taste. 2. Because you're an altogether different type from her, artless and ethical where she is worldly and devious. 3. Because he wants to ring down the curtain on her chase.

Is Man Really Fine Character?

IT REMAINS to be proved whether your confidence in his character is justified, whether he has the strength and decency you impute to him. Before you marry, you'd better discover whether a meeting of minds is possible on matters which vitally affect intimate relationship. Here is a test case.

In effect, tell him mildly that you see a problem on the horizon in Mrs. Blank, whose motives unfortunately aren't as pretty as her manner, who is trying—can't he see?—to turn you against him or queer the engagement. Tell him you've worried a bit about it; have felt badly, from time to time; and have finally decided she isn't your problem to solve alone—especially since your engagement to him brought her into your life.

Cite chapter and verse of what you mean and tell him you'd like to relax and let him cope. His reaction to this appeal will show what breed of man he is. If he's the right sort, he'll cope to your heart's content, beginning now. Mrs. Blank will be beautifully blocked. If he hems and haws, seems foolishly flattered or pleads indulgence of Mrs. B., my advice is don't marry him. A man who lets two women wrestle for him isn't worth the attention of either. M. H.

First Day of June Begins Month of Wedding Processions

Koppleman—Holt

Miss Gail Holt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon H. Holt of Washington, became the bride of Irvin Jerome Koppelman, son of Mrs. Max S. Koppelman and the late Dr. Koppelman of Baltimore, Md., in a ceremony performed yesterday in the Arlington home of the bridegroom's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Kerpelman. Rabbi Henry Segal officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was gowned in white satin with veil falling from a Mary Queen of Scots headdress. She carried gardenias on a Bible. Miss Edith Holt, maid of honor for her sister, wore a turquoise blue ensemble and Mrs. Kerpelman, matron of honor, was in gray and pink. Both carried gladioli and roses. Brenda Kerpelman acted as flower girl. Mr. Kerpelman served as best man.

The newlyweds will make their home in Arlington. Mrs. Koppelman is a graduate of Wilson Teachers College and her husband is resuming his studies at George Washington University following three years' duty with the Army

Winchester—Guyer

Miss Billie Lucille Guyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Guyer of Brownwood, Tex., and Marvin E. Winchester, son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy J. Winchester of Washington, exchanged marriage vows yesterday in Fort Lincoln Chapel. The Rev. Daniel J. Justice officiated and Earl Sangston gave the bride in marriage.

Gowned in white lace with finger-tip veil and carrying white roses and orchids, the bride was attended by her sister, Miss Ruth Guyer, wearing blue net with bouquet of yellow roses. James W. Winchester served his brother as best man and two other brothers, Mariott and Francis Winchester, were ushers.

Root—Cohen

Miss Sylvia Z. Cohen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cohen, this city, was married yesterday to Morris H. Root, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Root, also of Washington. Rabbi Harry Silverstone performed the ceremony at the Club Cairo.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore a lace-trimmed gown of white satin with long train and veil attached to a pearl tiara. She carried orchids on a Bible. Mrs. Jacob Mackler, costumed in aqua, served as matron of honor, and Miss Estella M. Volk, attired in pea green, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Misses Frances Schleider, Frances Yuster, and Gertrude Shner, wearing yellow, rose and French blue taffeta, respectively. All carried roses.

Samuel H. Root was his brother's best man and ushers were Morton W. Cohen, brother of the bride; Armand Terl, cousin of the bride, and Irving Hurwitz. Lawrence Kessler acted as ringbearer and Arlene Gudelsky as flower girl.

Following a wedding trip to the Catskill Mountains and New York, the couple will reside in Washington. The bride attended George Washington and American universities and Mr. Root studied at Benjamin Franklin University.

Mrs. Daniel Burret Phelan, who was Miss Leyla Entezam Horan before her marriage on Saturday in St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York. The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold J. T. Horan, is the granddaughter of Mrs. Charles Hume of Washington. Mrs. Horan is the former Miss Margaret Hume

Francis Biddles Entertain For Brother and Portrait

By Marie McNair

Scholarly looking Francis Biddle in his court robes looked down from the walls of his Georgetown house yesterday on a good many old friends. But he was there in the flesh, too, at the party which he and Mrs. Biddle gave in honor of Mr. Biddle's brother, George Biddle, who painted the portrait, and Mrs. George Biddle, sculptress, here for the weekend from New York.

Yesterday was sort of unofficial unveiling day for the painting which is soon to hang with other former Attorneys General in the halls of the Department of Justice.

Did Murals Here

Mrs. Biddle had asked members of the Supreme Court, some of Mr. Biddle's former colleagues in the Cabinet; the Brazilian Ambassador, Carlos Martins, and Mme. Martins, who's a sculptor and is interested in all the arts; the French Ambassador and Mme. Bonnet, the Chinese Ambassador and Mme. Koo, and the retiring Netherlands Ambassador and Mme. Loudon. And included among the guests were the Biddles' personal friends and others whose talents lie in the field of art.

Not more than a dozen years ago, George Biddle came to Washington to live, with a commission to paint the murals in the Department of Justice. That same year Mrs. Biddle, known professionally as Helen Sardeau, completed a bas-relief for the lobby of the post-office building at Ossining, N. Y., under the Treasury Department's art program.

Since then, the two have been to Brazil—Mr. Biddle has written a book, and was sent to Germany by Look Magazine to sketch the Nazis figuring in the Nuremburg trials.

Members of the Biddle family seem to have a corner on talent.

Mrs. Francis Biddle is a brilliant poet, writing under the name Katherine Garrison Chapin. Perhaps the best known of all her verse is "Lament for the Stolen," a symphonic poem set to music by Harl McDonald and presented by Eugent Ormandy and the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra several years ago.

A sister, Cornelia Van A. Chapin, is recognized as a leading sculptress, has been widely exhibited in Paris, New York, Philadelphia and Washington and is one of the few living artists to carve into stone without preliminary sketch. She recently held a showing in New York for which Mrs. Biddle went up to be present on the opening day.

TOWN TOPICS: Mr. and Mrs. John Washington Davidge, who have just sold their home on Rock Creek dr. to the Canadian Government for their Embassy, have six months to find another house. Meanwhile, Mrs. Davidge is making plans to leave Washington within the month for the summer. The Davidge summer home at Mount Prospect, Lancaster, N. H., was built by Mrs. Davidge's father, the late John W. Weeks, one time Secretary of War, and Senator from Massachusetts.

Vice Admiral and Mrs. Adolphus Andrews will be in San Francisco the end of the month for the wedding of their son, Adolphus, jr., and Miss Emily Pope Taylor, daughter of Mrs. Pope Trumbull and of Moseley B. Taylor of New York. The ceremony is scheduled to take place June 2 in St. Matthew's Episcopal Church, San Mateo, and a reception will follow at Mrs. Trumbell's home in Burlingame. The bridegroom will graduate this month from the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration.

Mr., Mrs. Kelley Visiting Here

Mr. and Mrs. McClure Kelley and their son, Andrew, of Wayne, Ill., are in Washington with Mr. Kelley's mother, Mrs. William Fitch Kelley, at Wardman Park Hotel.

They will attend the graduation of their daughter, Miss Joyce Kelley at Madeira School and the tea dance which Mrs. Kelley will give at the Sulgrave Club Wednesday afternoon to introduce her granddaughter to society.

Mr. and Mrs. McClure Kelley and their children will leave on June 10 for the North Shore and Mrs. William Kelley is leaving for her home in Illinois the middle of the month.

Town Talk—

Romantic as a Party to Debs May Seem, One for the Poets, Is Really a Dream

By Eva Hinton

WHAT could be more romantic in the spring than a Washington garden party for debutantes? Well, possibly more romantic and certainly more unusual, was the garden party for poets given the other afternoon in her Georgetown garden by pretty artist, Marcella Winslow.

Her guests were the Fellows in American Letters who are here for the annual conference on the subject of poetry at the Library of Congress. The poets are the advisers to the library on matters concerning poetry and each year a different one stays on all year as consultant on poetry at the library. The first consultant in the series was Allen Tate and further along in point of time came Robert Penn Warren, who recently won the Pulitzer Prize for Poetry.

Consultant at the library for this year is good-looking, dark and wavy-haired Karl Shapiro who with his soft voice and calm manner is anything but the wild-eyed poet type. Last year's consultant was Louise Bogan who writes poetry and criticism for the New Yorker. Another "fellow" is Mrs. Francis Biddle whose poetry pen-name is Katherine Chapin.

Mrs. Winslow's garden party for the poets also included an art exhibit at which she showed them portraits of each other done by herself. A portrait of Mrs. Biddle is still on her easel; the only one she hasn't painted is Miss Bogan. Mrs. Winslow painted Mr. Shapiro at the Library of Congress.

When she was painting him, Mr. Shapiro asked Mrs. Winslow why she has painted the portraits of so many poets. She replied that "poets are a hobby with her" and explained that she had a great-uncle who was Poet Laureate of the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg.

After Mrs. Winslow's garden party the other afternoon the poets were entertained at dinner by Mrs. Biddle at her house in Georgetown.

AND, getting back to portraits, Eleanor Martin, who lived here for three years during the war while she did portraits of such Washingtonians as Mrs. Kent Legare, Eugene Carusi, the Parke Brady family and Mrs. James M. Barnes, is thinking of setting up a studio in the Capital again.

Recently she came down from New York to attend a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Julius Wadsworth and had such an attack of homesickness (not to mention a lot of new portrait commissions) that she has made plans to return in about a fortnight and stay at the Fairfax for some time.

After that she will go to Venezuela and Guatemala to fill commissions and will probably also take in Honolulu. "Because," she says, "I wear Chinese pajamas while I paint and they're pretty artsy, but I bought them in Honolulu in 1939 and now they have holes in them that are getting bigger every minute, so I must return to the scene of the crime and collect some new ones."

ANOTHER recent visitor to Washington was Lucius Wilmerding who, with his attractive wife, is living in Princeton. Very popular in the Capital, the Wilmerdings lived here for a number of years before the war. She and their children, plus a few British refugee children, remained here while he was overseas in the Navy.

Now Mr. Wilmerding will be see no oftener in these parts, as he is interested in getting a bill in Congress to put into effect a plan for abolishing the Vice Presidency. (What next?)

ANOTHER interesting visitor to Washington is Mrs. Harold Lamb, wife of the author and expert on Russia and Asia. Mrs. Lamb, who was a Washington resident for two years while her husband was overseas, has been visiting the Misses Emily and Nannie Chase and renewing many friendships.

Ask Anne — Your Questions On Homemaking

I have an ecru lace tablecloth with dark coffee stains on it. Have washed it in soapy water, but the stains are just as dark. What could one use to not change the ecru color and yet remove the stains? R. H. A.

Make a solution of 2 tablespoons of hydrogen peroxide to each gallon of water. Be sure to test the solution on a small edge of the cloth to be sure it will not affect the color of the cloth. Then soak the stains for ½ hour or longer if necessary. Rinse twice.

Cream wax would be satisfactory for blond woods.

Can you suggest a cleansing agent to remove a sour smell in a refrigerator? Is it possible that uncovered fruits such as oranges and grapefruits are causing the odor? S. S.

Each time the refrigerator is defrosted, the walls, shelves and bottom should be washed thoroughly with a solution of 1 teaspoon of baking soda to 1 quart of warm water. No, we do not think that the grapefruit or oranges would be causing the odor, unless, of course, they have begun to sour.

Would you kindly give me information as to the proper method of caring for alligator shoes and bag? C. A. C.

Use saddle soap and a neutral leather cream or special leather preserver over the bag. Wipe off the excess polish with a clean, dry cloth.

U. N. Delegate Warren Austin Picked as 'Father of the Year'

New York, June 1 (AP).—Warren R. Austin, special United States Ambassador to the United Nations, has been chosen "Father of the Year," the National Father's Day Committee announced today.

Austin

The award was made because of Austin's "leadership of the United States delegation and for contributing thereby to our children's future," the announcement said.

It added that in the opinion of the committee "it is not only our children's future, but the future of children everywhere which hinges on the success of the United Nations. Ambassador Austin's tireless efforts to make the United Nations a living, lasting, working world institution has earned him the gratitude of fathers everywhere."

Secretary of State Marshall will present the "Father of the Year" medal to Austin at 2:30 p. m. Tuesday in Marshall's office.

Youth Returns For Bike Hit By Fallen DC-4

New York, June 1 (AP).—A 15-year-old boy who missed death by seconds as he left his bicycle in the path of the United Air Lines DC-4 plane which crashed at La Guardia Field last Thursday night, appeared at the scene today to claim his battered bike and to take pictures of the wreckage.

Police had been investigating to determine whether the bicycle found in the wreckage of the crash which took 42 lives was a discarded bike or belonged to someone at the scene.

The boy, Richard Schultz, a third term high school student, told police he had been out snake hunting and had left his bicycle to look for a container for a 15-inch garter snake he had caught, when the plane hurtled over and crashed into the ditch where it burst into flames.

"It burst into flames at the engines," Richard said. "It hit 40 feet away from where I was standing. A man dashed out of the Academy of Aeronautics and shouted 'Look out, the gas tanks will explode.' I saw the flames around my bicycle and I backed up against the wall of the academy. I stayed there 15 minutes and then I left. I still have the snake at home."

The disastrous crash claimed its forty-second victim today when Margaret Leddin, 31, of New York City died in Flushing Hospital. Six other survivors still are in hospitals.

Converted Army Plane

Bainbridge, Md., June 1 (U.P.).—The Eastern Airlines DC-4 which carried 53 persons to sudden death Friday night near here was one of 20 converted Army transport planes operated by the company, it was disclosed tonight.

This was made known as Government and private investigators reportedly leaned to a theory the crash was caused by a structural failure in the tail assembly.

They confirmed that part of tail assembly, its stabilizers and fins, broke off before it crashed.

Dr. R. C. Dodson, assistant medical examiner for Cecil County, reported that 33 of the 53 bodies had been identified.

Three Dead in Crash

Montreal, June 1 (U.P.).—Three persons were killed today when a single-engined Bellanca Sky Rocket seaplane crashed in the St. Lawrence River about a mile from the Fairchild aircraft plant at Longeuil, Quebec.

Two Killed at Air Rodeo

U. N. Palestine Board Assured Full Quorum

Lake Success, N. Y., June 1 (U.P.).—The United Nations' Palestine Commission was guaranteed a full quorum for the first time today and freed of a threatened Arab boycott.

Delayed a week by the absence of half of its members, the 11-nation committee waded into half a dozen organizing and administrative problems which must be solved before it flies to the Holy Land June 6.

Sweden's former Justice Emil Sandstroem was the latest of the six missing delegates to arrive. The Canadian, Dutch and Uruguayan representatives are expected within the next 24 hours, assuring the committee of a quorum for its second public meeting Monday afternoon.

Election of a chairman and vice chairman will take place tomorrow, after which the committee will decide whether to include European refugee camps on its itinerary and discuss the granting of liaison status to Jewish, Arabian and British representatives.

Full cooperation from the Arab league was indicated by its secretary general, Abdul Rahman Azzam Pasha.

A Pennsy spokesman said he did not know if the stones were thrown by someone or if they had been hurled against the windows by train wheels.

The injured, taken from the train at Wilmington, Del., suffered slight cuts, the Pennsy spokesman said. They are: Mr. and Mrs. Raymond E. Berdick, Hastings-on-the-Hudson, N. Y., and Frank Clement, Atlantic City, N. J.

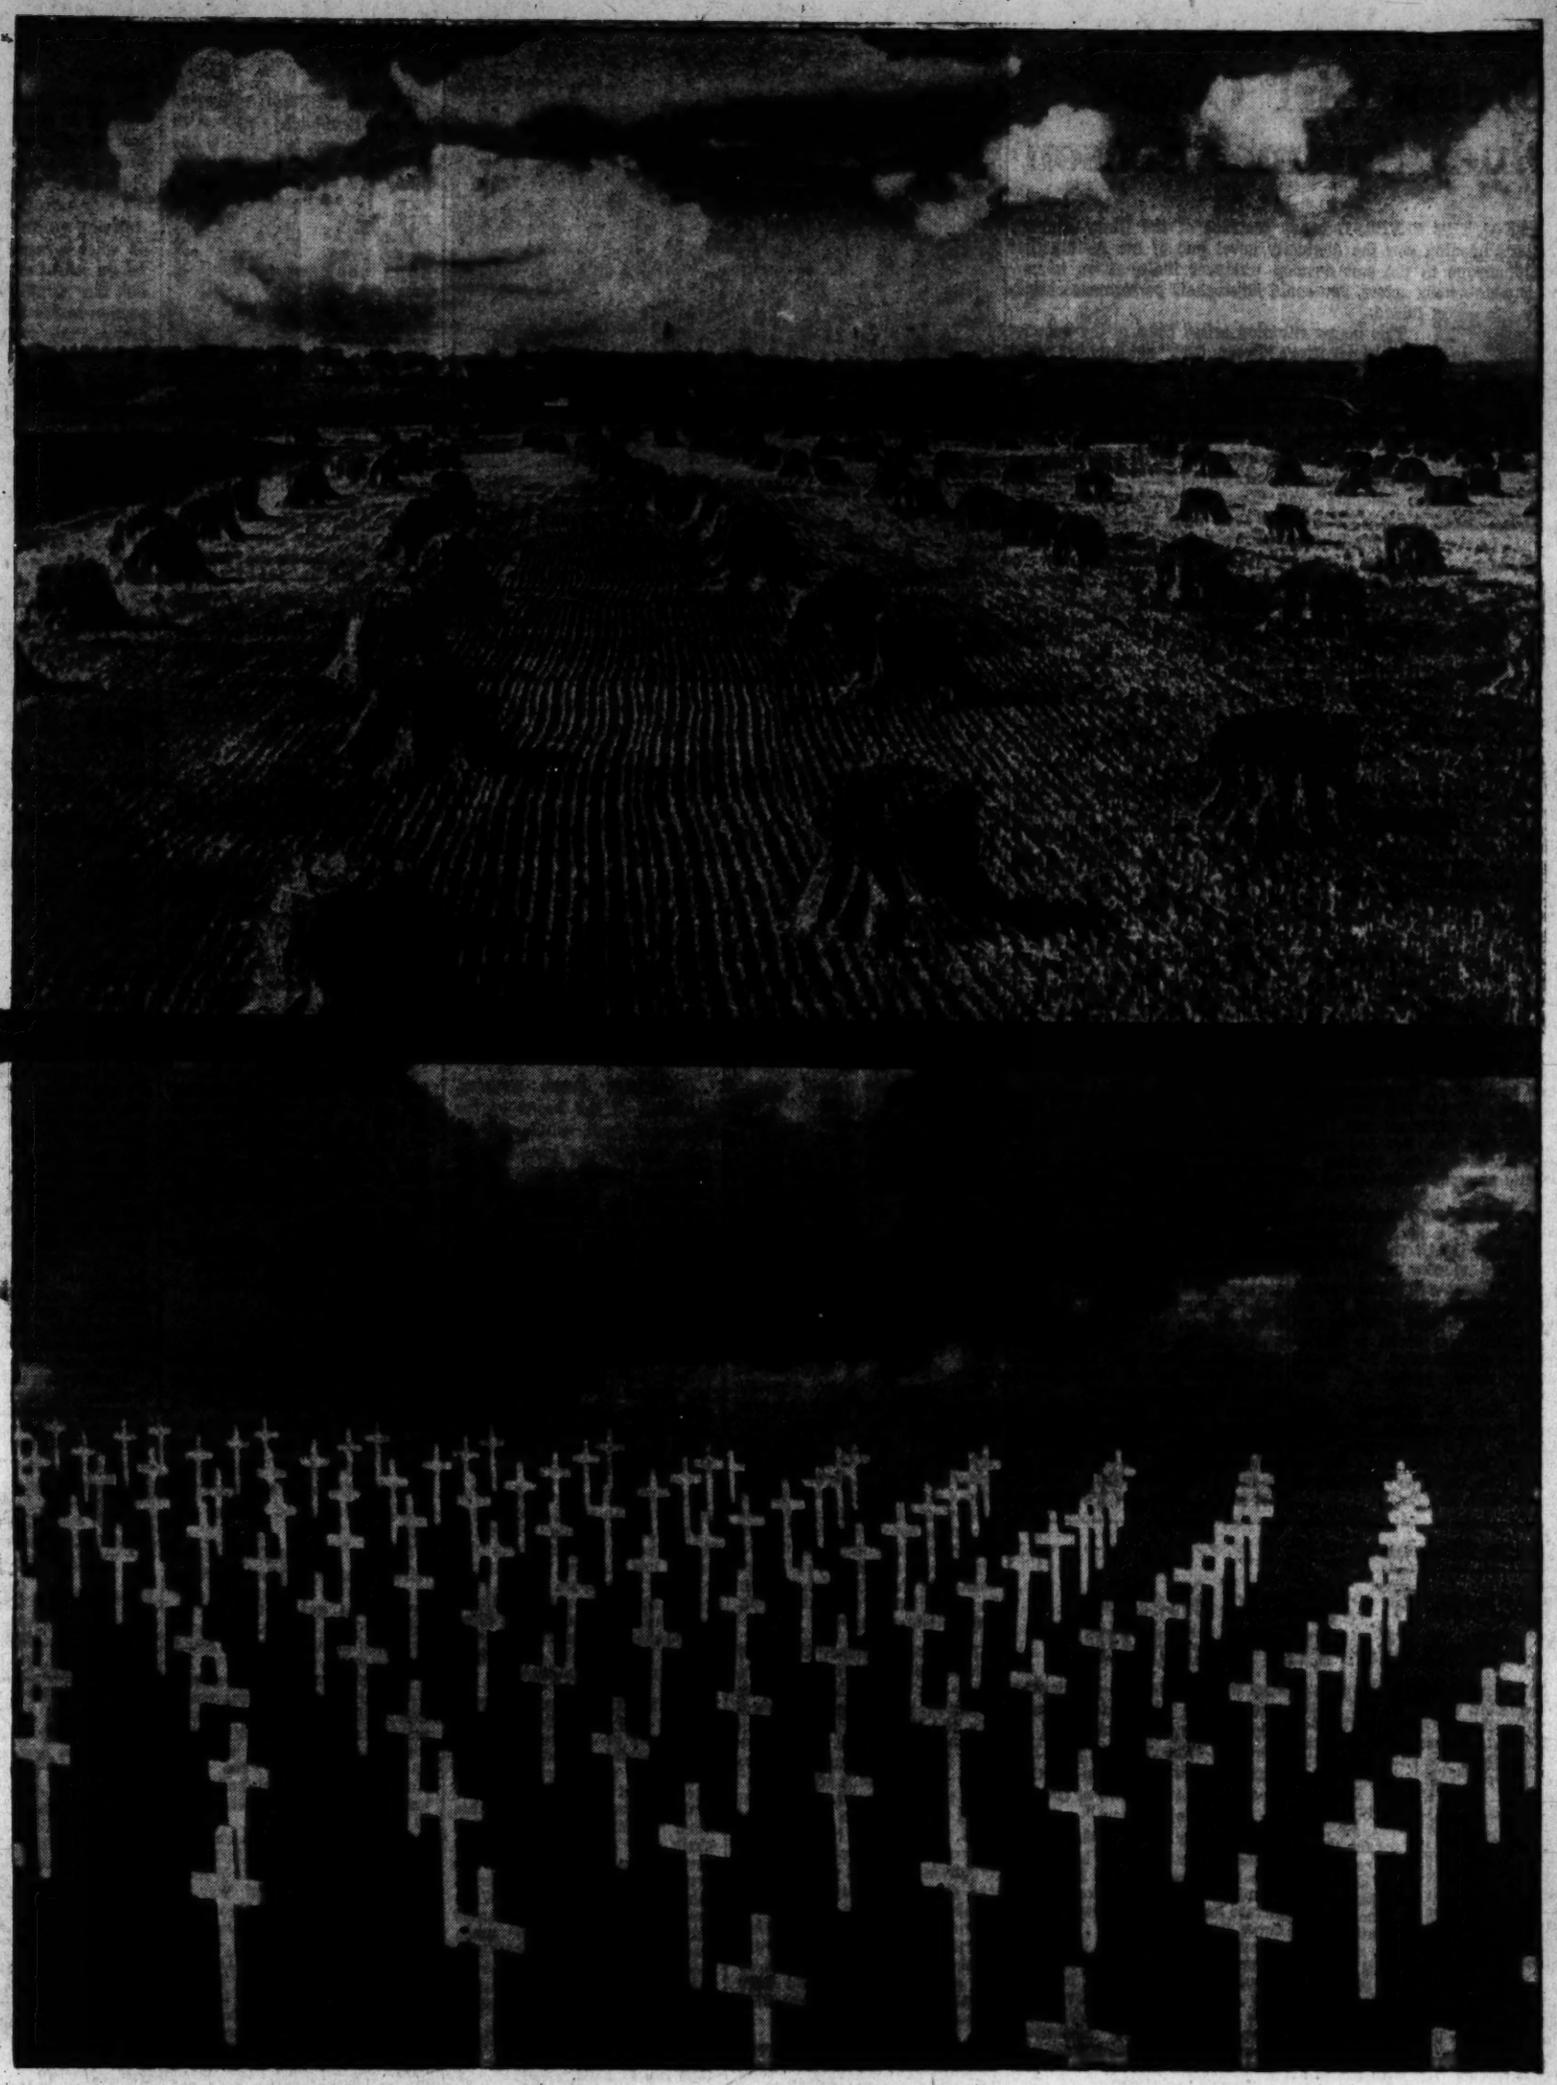
PEACE OR ANOTHER WAR?



From high places everywhere come warnings of another possible war.

They grow ominously out of the fact that America and the Soviet Union confront each other in all parts of the world, and are engaged in a conflict of power and influence.

To many, this Russian-American conflict has the sharp outline of an impending duel for domination of the world.

This, however, is not necessarily the true view, if history is taken into account. For, as Walter Lippmann, noted authority on world affairs, points out in the June Journal: Russia and America appear to be engaged in a duel for the world only because all the other countries are, for the time being, so weak.

Several great empires—the British, the French, the German, the Austrian and the Japanese—separated Russia and America up to the time of the two World Wars. Those empires are now gone or seriously weakened. And for the first time, Russia and America confront each other directly.

Some of the nameless voices insist that one of the two great survivors must eliminate the other . . . that their struggle for the world empire is inevitable.

To these, Mr. Lippmann answers: "I believe the Second World War need not have happened—it could have been prevented—and therefore I believe that a Third World War need not, and may not, happen."

Mr. Lippmann bases his projection of the future on this cardinal point of the past: The debates, the negotiations, the hard decisions of policy that led to each of the two World Wars could have been different, and being different, they could have led to different results.

It was not inevitable, for example, that we remained disarmed after Japan seized Manchuria and Hitler came to power in Germany. It was not inevitable that we did nothing while almost the whole European continent was conquered by the Germans, and all the ports of China by the Japanese. If we were able to destroy the Japanese Empire in 1945, it was not predetermined that we could not have checked that empire years earlier.

Is there any doubt that history could have been different if we had done sooner what we did later?

Mr. Lippmann concludes: IF THERE WERE CHOICES IN THE PAST, THEN THERE ARE CHOICES IN THE FUTURE.

And, since history has thrust our nation into a position of world leadership, the burden of those future choices rests on each American, personally—for the course of history will be largely determined by the men each of us helps elect to act in our name.

Such is the challenge which destiny has put to the American people. We, and our elected leaders, have in our hands the power to achieve one of the great triumphs of all time.

This is Walter Lippmann's answer to the insistent voices of doom. Mr. Lippmann brings his enlightening survey of the day's most momentous problem to the world's largest audience of women. He brings it to them, in the June Journal, because women, guardians of the generations to come, are concerned vitally with every event and decision and choice that can shape the future.

Since there may not be enough June Journals for all those who want to study Mr. Lippmann's illuminating article in its entirety, we will send reprints to all who request them. Write Ladies' Home Journal, Independence Square, Philadelphia 5, Pa.

America as a society can be no greater than the homes which mar or make its citizens. Woman's responsibility is to shape its citizen-children. For this she needs all the traditional skills of homemaking, health and child guidance. She needs, too, the greatest possible understanding of the complex society in which she lives—to prepare her children to live well in that society. The Journal is edited by one basic policy—to bring women the best, most accurate guidance in this great role as mothers and home makers—to bring them, also, information to help them live well in an ever-widening world. The response of women to this concept is enabling the Journal to set new records by every known standard of publishing.

Haila Stoddard in Tricky Comedy

New to Washington, 'Dream Girl' Opens Olney Summer Season

By Richard L. Coe

AMONG THE SEVERAL happy features of the Olney summer theater's opening was the distinctly novel one of not feeling that should anyone in the cast develop whatever indisposition is now fashionable among actors, you could finish their performance blindfolded.

Haila Stoddard

This happy situation arises because the opening play, Elmer Rice's "Dream Girl," not only has never played Washington but is still a stranger to the citronella and amateur circuits. That it is brightly acted by Haila Stoddard and the Olney's company amounts almost to an added attraction.

No doubt, before the summer is over we shall have our injections of "Blithe Spirit," "Seven Keys to Baldpate" and "Dear Ruth," pleasant enough plays certainly, but even their headiest partisans will admit they pall a trifle after the seventh hearing.

A perverted daydream that someone in the cast of those warhorses will break his neck during a performance and that you may, if you choose, save the evening by repeating his familiar lines is frequently all that keeps one out of the woods.

So a hearty welcome to the Olney folk for starting their season with an unfamiliar play. With Miss Stoddard, who starred in it much of the long New York run, "Dream Girl" is well worth a trip to the country.

If you haven't got a car and can't hypnotize anyone who has, you can get out there via special bus leaving the Georgia-Alaska ave. street car terminal at 8 p. m. and returning right after the play. With the exception of tonight, there are nightly performances through next Sunday.

"DREAM GIRL." A comedy by Elmer Rice in two acts and 17 scenes presented as the first in a summer season of plays by ATF productions, Redge Allen, Glenn Taylor and Evelyn Fregman, managers. Settings by Randall Brooks. Directed by Charles S. Dubin. At the Olney Theater, Olney, Md.

Miss Stoddard Cavorts Merrily

The play is a light, tricky comedy about a girl who day-dreams her way through life. Whenever a problem comes along or even a spare minute, Georgina Allerton imagines herself the heroine of some incident of soap-opera proportions. We see her for only a day, but an important one. She quashes her yen for her sappy brother-in-law and marries a realistic newspaperman before it's over.

Before it is, she's imagined herself author of a book as popular as "Always Opal," the defendant in a lurid murder trial, a kept woman wallowing in exotic Mexico, a street-walker recognized by the men current in her real life and an actress who saves a Shakespearean performance by playing Portia. (See paragraph four above!)

The idea is amusing. Rice tosses wisecracks about dreams and real life. It's a far cry from "The Adding Machine" and "Street Scene" Rice, but if he wants to pull a Moss Hart why not?

With Miss Stoddard on stage all but 2 minutes of the play and not missing—at least not perceptibly—any of about 600 cues, the Olney's first offering is largely hers and she's lots of fun.

But the leading man role is a juicy one and Joseph Hardy, of the resident company, comes through handsomely. He plays with vigor and humor. He's got a good, brisk voice. A few more plays and we'll know whether he's an actor or just being himself.

Far more proficient is Randall Brooks' clever setting, whereby the many changes of scene and mood are accomplished with smoothness remarkable for a stage hardly geared to such goings on.

Now, having opened with so bright an offering, the Olney's job will be to keep reasonably close to such a standard. You'd better try to catch "Dream Girl," though, just to see what the standard is.

HONEYMOONERS—Shirley Temple and Guy Madison as young love prettily packaged in "Honeymoon," which opens at Keith's Wednesday morning. Franchot Tone also is starred in this comedy-romance set in Mexico City

'Man Bites Dog'—Or Union Pays Rockefeller

WELFARE: Winthrop Rockefeller, member of the board of the National Urban League, attended a meeting of the local managers of the ILGWU, and asked for a contribution to the League. After Rockefeller had received a check and left, the union's president, David Dubinsky, sighed: When I became interested in union work and the welfare of the laboring man, I never dreamed that it would entail giving money to a Rockefeller."

Eleanor Roosevelt

LIBEL: Ferruccio Tagliavini, the Metropolitan Opera tenor, tells of a columnist in Rome who once described a countess as "that cow." The countess brought suit for libel and won the case. The damages were assessed at $500 . . . the columnist paid, and then asked the judge: "Since it now is clear that I may not call a countess a cow, would it be all right for me to call a cow a countess?" The judge assured him that this would not be libelous . . . "Okay, then, said the columnist, turning to the plaintiff and addressing her: "Hello, Countess."

POLITICS: Eleanor Roosevelt told the members of the Foreign Press Association that the Presidency of the United States is a job she wouldn't wish on any member of her sex. "Whoever goes into public life has got to have a hide like a rhinoceros," said Mrs. Roosevelt. "A woman must be prepared to take all that men take, and a little more—because here we believe that all is fair in love and politics. Men can stand up under whispering campaigns a little better than women, because we still feel that women should have a different kind of reputation than men. If by some fluke a woman were nominated and elected, she could not hold her following."

STANDARD: Mrs. Roosevelt's mother-in-law, the late Mrs. James Roosevelt, was reconciled to the different standards applied to the sexes. Once, in discussing with Jim Farley the alarming rate of divorces, she said: "In my day wives overlooked their husbands' indiscretions."

MOTTO: On June 14 the Saturday Evening Post will start publishing its nine-installment series by Admiral Halsey, and will report the incidents in which he allegedly said too much for quotation at the time . . . The family motto of the Halseys was given to one of the admiral's relatives by Henry VIII. It is "Nescit Vox Missa Reverti"—which was translated to the admiral as "A word once spoken can never return."

CHATTER: Frank Houston, chairman of the board of the Chemical Bank, will retire in July. He will be succeeded as chairman by Baxter Jackson, now president, who in turn will be succeeded by Harold Helm. . . . Dorothy Gish is recuperating from an attack of the mumps. . . . Lord Beaverbrook is having a hotel named after him at Fredericton, New Brunswick, where he has been vacationing. . . . The Eversharp and Kimberly pen companies soon may announce a new venture. . . . Lloyd C. Douglas, author of "The Robe," has completed 14 of the 24 chapters of his new novel about St. Peter, "The Big Fisherman." He'll have it ready in January.

ENTERPRISE: Gov. Mon Wallgren of Washington is working on a plan for breeding lobsters in Washington, by moving them from Maine just before they spawn. This was attempted some years ago and failed—because they were sent by railroad and the roe didn't survive the trip. Wallgren hopes to succeed this time by flying them from Maine to Washington.

CONTEST: When Wallgren was in New Orleans, he visited the home of Andrew Higgins, the shipbuilder, who suggested a game of pool. The Governor agreed and the match began. Wallgren innocently asked his host: "Is this the right way to chalk my cue-tip?" Higgins showed him how to do it. Wallgren made one ball, then missed. Higgins made three, then Wallgren made two and Higgins three again . . . "How much would I get if I hit this ball, this ball, etc., etc., and drive this ball into the pocket?" asked Wallgren, pointing to a five-ball combination shot. Higgins insisted: "That is impossible." Governor Wallgren made it, and then ran 41 balls.

SOCIAL NOTE: Ely Culbertson, the bridge champ, was in the Stork Club with Irina Baronova, the ballerina, and asked her to dance. When the dance was over Culbertson told the ballerina: "I know exactly how you feel—because, after all, some of the worst players in the world often ask to play bridge with me."

Keenan Wynn and Skelton To Remake 'The Red Mill'

Hollywood.—Keenan Wynn and Red Skelton wil be teamed in the parts in Victor Herbert's "The Red Mill" made famous by Fred Stone and the late Dave Montgomery. The picture, to be produced by Sam Marx for Metro, will retain all the Victor Herbert flavor with a modernized romantic treatment. Songs in it will include such old favorites as "Beautiful Isle of My Dreams," "In Old New York," "Whistle It," "Just Because You're You," and "Every Day Is Ladies' Day With Me." . . . When Bing Crosby met Murvyn Vye, he said, "I hear you're a fine actor and singer. How's your golf? Since we'll be together in 'Connecticut Yankee,' that's the thing that interests me." So Murvyn is golfing like mad at the Riviera Country Club to prepare for the picture. . . . Jack Moffit has completed his story "Live and Let Live" for Andre de Toth.

Red Skelton

Curls for Courageous

Errol Flynn had to bleach his hair for "Silver River," but got even with his stand-in and double, who had to bleach four shades lighter. Doug Fairbanks dyed his hair for "The Exile," and Rex Harrison has to put his up in bobby pins to give him a halo of ringlets for "Foxes of Harrow." . . . In years gone by we lost a fine Swedish actor, Lars Hansen, by fooling with his tresses. After having to submit to the curling irons for a picture he returned to Sweden and never came back . . . Spencer Tracy blew his topper when informed he'd have to have curls for "Captains Courageous," but the late Jack Barrymore loved his trips to the beauty parlor four times annually for permanent waves. What an audience he had. The operators stopped work just to listen to Jack's stories.

Bread and Butter Note

Evelyn Waugh, author of "Brideshead Revisited," enjoyed free hospitality here for weeks. Then, as usual, he returned to England and wrote a few fancy pieces about our town. He found only two things here that interested him: Charlie Chaplin and the Forest Lawn Cemetery. He made no further connection between the graveyard and the comedian.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Truman, GOP Agree On Modern 'Lazy' Art

By Drew Pearson

HARRY TRUMAN disagrees with his Republican Congress on a lot of things, but there is one question on which they see absolutely eye to eye. It is modern art.

Benton

Busy as he is, the President took time out recently to write a pungent letter to his own Assistant Secretary of State, William Benton, in which he called modern art "the vaporings of half-baked lazy people." In so doing, Harry lined himself up with the Republican members of the House Appropriations Committee, which had a field day criticizing the State Department's art program.

Defending this program, Benton wrote an explanatory letter to the President. The President then took time out in a confidential letter to give his own views on art. This column has now received a copy of the letter, which follows:

"April 2, 1947.

"The White House,
"Washington.
"Dear Mr. Benton:

"I appreciated very much your letter of the twenty-eighth in regard to the American Art Exhibit, which is going the rounds of various countries.

"I don't pretend to be an artist or a judge of art, but I am of the opinion that so-called modern art is merely the vaporings of half-baked lazy people. An artistic production is one which shows infinite ability for taking pains and if any of these so-called modern paintings show any such infinite ability, I am very much mistaken.

"There are a great many American artists who still believe that the ability to make things look as they are is the first requisite of a great artist—they do not belong to the so-called modern school. There is no art at all in connection with the modernists, in my opinion.

"Sincerely yours,
(Signed) "HARRY TRUMAN."
"Honorable William Benton,
"Assistant Secretary of State,
"Washington, D. C."

What Makes War

SHORTLY after World War I, this writer was encamped with 100 Bulgar prisoners and a handful of Serbian guards in the Yugoslav valley of "Dobro Do," engaged in rebuilding houses which the Bulgarian Army had burned during the war.

Dobro Do means "good valley," and the valley lived up to its name in beauty and charm—but not in the intelligence of its people. Perhaps not more than 10 per cent could read or write.

Our tents were pitched alongside a brick schoolhouse, which except for shattered windowpanes and a few floor boards torn up for firewood, was not badly damaged by the war. However, that school had been unused since 1912. I was there in 1919.

First there had been the Balkan War of 1912 against Turkey; then the Bulgarian War of 1913; then the World War of 1914. And during all that time, no children in "Dobro Do" had gone to school. There was a school teacher in Dobro Do, and we talked to him about getting back to work. But we had no window glass, no textbooks, no blackboards, no paper; and though our intentions were good, heavy snow forced us to leave the valley before we ever got round to reopening that school.

I have always felt a little guilty about this. But more important, I have always thought that one reason for continued warfare in the Balkans and the fact that Tito can now get away with a Communist dictatorship, is lack of education.

I also have thought that most Americans have little conception of what a great blessing our public school system is. If they did, they would give greater attention to the backbone of that system, the selection and pay of teachers.

Balkanizing Pa. Schools

THE MONEY which financed the reconstruction work we were doing in Dobro Do and other parts of the Balkans came mainly from Pennsylvania, in which State I got a large part of my own education. Today that State is so backward when it comes to teachers' salaries that I am almost ashamed to admit I went to school there.

Such starvation salaries are paid to Pennsylvania teachers that a progressive State like California makes recruiting raids on Penn schools and has no trouble skimming off the cream of the crop. As a result, the teacher exodus from Pennsylvania is appalling.

Today enrollment in Pennsylvania teachers' colleges has dropped from 9007 in 1940 to 3916 in 1945. Classrooms are overcrowded, some classes are without teachers to handle them, and the overturn is so great that as many as five different teachers may handle a single class in one year. In other words, Pennsylvania, the second wealthiest State in the Union, is rapidly Balkanizing its educational system.

Interesting thing is that the new Gov. James H. Duff made grandiose promises to improve Pennsylvania education — but that was before elections. Now he has come up with the meager Homsher bill which won't come anywhere near remedying the situation. Meanwhile also, Pennsylvania, second wealthiest State, has the lowest per capita State tax of any save the South, Iowa and Nebraska. Meanwhile also, Governor Duff is chopping about 94 million dollars off various business taxes—including bank and trust company shares, corporate loans, mercantile tax and a manufacturing exemption from capital stock tax.

He can dish out this gravy to business, but he can't afford an adequate salary boost to Pennsylvania teachers.

Paris Halves Bread Ration During Strike

Paris, June 1 (U.P.).—A 50 per cent reduction in Paris bread rations for Monday and Tuesday was decreed tonight to assure sufficient supplies during the 48-hour strike by Paris bakers, which began at midnight tonight.

The measure, which will bring the already reduced ration down to 150 grams, was approved in an emergency meeting early tonight among officials of the Seine prefecture and Premier Paul Ramadier.

The Paris bakers' union struck against the government's refusal to grant the bakers the 1000-franc ($8) monthly fixed indemnity for hard workers.

Paris housewives were expected to be caught short, since there was no advance warning.

Throughout the nation labor remained restive. In the northern industrial center of Lille 650 workers were still on strike in various factories. In Laval, foundry workers decided today to call a 24-hour strike for higher wages.

Bank employes in Lille have also called an unlimited strike for Monday. In Paris, the strike of gasoline truckers caused most of the capital's filling stations to run dry late yesterday.

Krim Escape Cools French Toward Egypt

Paris, June 1 (AP).—Relations between France and Egypt were strained today as French diplomatic quarters accused the Egyptian government of encouraging the one-time Moroccan rebel, Emir Abd el Krim, to jump ship at Suez.

Government circles said they were convinced Krim left the vessel which was taking him to a new exile in southern France only after persistent pleading by local authorities.

Some Parisian newspapers attributed Egypt's action to a desire to establish herself as the protector of the Arab world.

Arab circles in Rabat predicted Krim sooner or later will attempt to enter Morocco in disguise.

The Egyptian embassy in Paris denied Egyptian authorities had invited Krim to reside in Egypt, but said he merely had been invited to visit the King at the royal palace.

Ex-GI Families Form 32 Pct. Of Population

War veterans and their families now make up one third of the population and within five years they will account for 43 per cent, the Veterans' Administration estimated yesterday.

Thereafter, unless new wars change the rate, the veteran-family population will level off.

The Veterans' Administration computed the January 1, 1947, veteran-family population at 46 million, 32 per cent of the Nation's total. It forecast for January 1, 1952, 62,300,000, or 43 per cent, and for January 1, 1957, 62,500,000, or 41 per cent.

It defined a veteran's family as a family unit living together and headed by a veteran, which might include a wife, children, parents, and relatives by blood, marriage or adoption. Not included in the calculations were dependents of deceased veterans, parents and other relatives heading families which include veterans, or parents or dependents of a veteran not living in the same household with him.

U. N. Will Get Egypt's Row With Britain

Cairo, Egypt, June 1 (U.P.).—Premier Mahmoud Fahmy Nokrashy Pasha told the press tonight that Egypt will submit her dispute with Great Britain to the United Nations.

Negotiations for revision of the Anglo-Egyptian treaty of 1936 were broken off by Egypt last January after they had become bogged down on the Sudanese issue. Britain has demanded that the Sudanese be permitted to choose their own form of future government, whether it be as an independent state or in union with Egypt. Egypt, however, has insisted the Sudan be united with Egypt under the Egyptian crown.

Sugar Growers to Get Extra Rations Again

By The Associated Press

The Agriculture Department announced yesterday that growers of sugar cane and sugar beets will be allowed additional sugar beyond regular consumer rations. They were allowed additional quantities last year.

In addition to regular rations, such growers may obtain either 25 pounds of tax-free sugar for each member of their family and permanent employes, or 25 pounds for each acre of sugar cane or sugar beets grown, which ever is the smaller.

Epsilon Sigma Alpha Elects President

Senator Sees Bar to Reds In Argentina

By the United Press

Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.) said yesterday that Argentina might well become a bulwark against communism and he urged the United States to join with her and other Latin-American nations in a hemispheric defense pact.

Brewster spoke on a radio interview with Charles Parmer of the "Parmer from Washington" broadcast from Station WPIK, Alexandria, Va.

He said that Argentina recently had obtained jet planes from Great Britain and remarked:

"I don't like to see South America move toward Europe for armaments."

He urged the United States to allow the early opening of the long-talked-of Rio de Janeiro conference at which a permanent hemispheric defense pact would be signed to carry out a temporary arrangement of this sort reached at Chapultepec, Mexico, in 1945.

The United States has refused to go to such a conference so far on grounds that it could not enter a pact with Argentina until the country got rid of Nazi agents as it promised to in the Chapultepec agreement.

Slavs Aiding Greek Band, Probers Told

Salonika, Greece, June 1 (AP). The Yugoslav deserters told the United Nations Investigation Subcommission today that a Greek guerilla band of more than 500 based on Mount Beles at the border juncture of Bulgaria, Yugoslavia and Greece was being supplied by the Yugoslav army.

Wounded Greek guerillas at this base also received treatment from the Yugoslav army, they said.

The two Yugoslav soldiers, Alberto Lukitch and Frato Matovich, said they deserted on May 10 and crossed into Greece through Doiran, Yugoslav border town. Both told the commission they had been frontier guards and were at Beles before leaving Yugoslavia.

They reported that a Yugoslav ozna (secret police) commissar was with the guerilla band constantly but that Yugoslav military officers were with it only when supplies were delivered from Doiran. The guerillas, they added, were armed with all types of weapons, and a Yugoslav army doctor was assigned to care for their wounded.

THE DISTRICT LINE

by W. E. G.

HMMMMM!

A. E. Scott, of International News Photos, is drumming up publicity for the dance to be given on June 6 by the White House News Photographers Association.

His announcement reveals that "wives and sweethearts of members have been invited to bring their favorite photographer to the ball."

If anybody shows up with a wife AND a sweetheart, Scotty, keep your camera handy for an action shot.

MONKEY BUSINESS

A monkey gets no sympathy,
However hard his plight is.
For he, to all of human kind,
An unalloyed delight is.

And if he scratches for a flea
Or worries with his itches,
It leaves the Zoo's humanity
Amused and tied in stitches.

The day may bring calamity,
Deplorable and various;
But all the world is sure to find
His each mischance hilarious.

A monkey gets no sympathy,
No matter how he's pained.
His broken arms and broken legs
Bring laughter unrestrained.

LIFE IS LIKE THAT

We'll call the District Liner who reported this story Eleanor, and omit her last name as she requested:

I was on my way to the hospital for my daily physiotherapy. The cab stopped to pick up a young mother and her small child.

The mother was nervous and excited, the child almost hysterical. She was pulling and yanking on him, and kept up a continuous stream of abuse.

"I don't know why you was ever born. Stop that now. Alla time botherin' people. Keep your hands offa that. People that has kids is crazy, that's what. Now you stop that or I'll slap you good . . ."

At the hospital, a new patient was on the adjoining table in the treatment room. Before they pulled the curtain between us, I caught a glimpse of her. She was thirtyish and radiant, and there was a note of urgency in her voice.

"This may be our last chance, so these ray treatments are terribly important to us. I'm 36 now you see—and we've prayed so hard for a baby. There just isn't anything in the world more important than having a child of your own, is there?"

EXPLANATION

Felix Gentile, of 1808 Connecticut ave. nw., has found out why the brickwork on the new M st. power plant is being put on from the top down.

The upper portion of the building is set back, giving sufficient support to permit laying the bricks there. This, in turn, makes it possible to put the roof on, and get started on the internal machinery (which requires protection from the elements.)

See how simple these things are when somebody explains them?

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

As the L-2 bus came to a halt at 13th and I sts. nw. the other night, an excited woman stuck her head in the door and asked the driver:

"Did anybody turn in a found article on your last trip? I left my bus on a purse."

POT LUCK

A resident of the vicinity writes that there are entirely too many flower pots setting on window ledges in the neighborhood of 14th and Belmont sts. nw.

He says that whenever he walks along the sidewalk below, he keeps thinking of what would happen if somebody upstairs would inadvertently dislodge one of those flower pots.

I know what would happen. The guy who got beaned would come staggering home, and his better half would take one look at him and exclaim:

"Potted again, eh?"

Grin and Bear It

"It's the advertising department—They got testimonials from stage, screen and radio stars for our amazing new formula and when are we going to discover it?"

The Bridge Deck

By Florence Osborn

The woman declarer of today's three no-trump deal saw seven possible diamond tricks in dummy, but in order to take them she had to disregard percentages. Our friend, Frank B. Lord of Washington, watched Mrs. C. J. Carlstrand manage the play in a duplicate match at the National Press Club.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 3 ♠.

The men played the hand and won the spade opening lead with dummy's ace. There was no need to hold up as West's fourth-best lead placed each defender with four spades. Realizing that they had a 68 per cent chance of finding the adverse diamonds split 3-2, the men played the ace, covering their lone jack, and continued the king, expecting to run home with a spade, seven diamonds and a club. But East showed out and in each case declarer's reliance on percentages trapped him, costing him a diamond trick in addition to a heart and three spades.

Mrs. Carlstrand won the opening lead with the spade ace. A glance at dummy's long diamonds and her own long club suit suggested uneven distribution elsewhere, possibly a 4-1 diamond break.

If she first cashed the diamond jack she would have only a 50-50 chance of reentering the board with the heart queen by finding West with the heart ace, but, knowing that a player rarely makes a fourth-best opening lead without at least one sure reentry in his hand, she decided that West held the ace.

Mrs. Carlstrand led low to the diamond jack and returned a small heart, and West turned up with the ace.

West took the heart ace and the defenders ran three spade tricks, but that was all, declarer winning the remaining tricks with the club ace, heart queen and the long diamonds. South lost a heart and three spades.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Forever Friends

The friends on whom I call today. . . With favors to bestow . . . Are nowhere near the final count. . . Of all the friends I know . . For there are many others who . . . Have shared my smiles and tears . . . And who have come and gone away . . . Throughout the yesteryears . . . Perhaps I do not see them or . . . receive a written word . . . And maybe I have lost the sound . . . Of voices I have heard . . . Perhaps they are too busy or . . . My time is occupied . . . Or maybe God summoned them . . . Across the great divide . . . But I have not forgotten them . . . And they are still my friends . . . Because to me a friendship is . . . A song that never ends.

● GEORGIA . . . Land of natural beauty . . . home of Stone Mountain, largest solid rock in the world . . . the serene Blue Ridge Mountains . . . and sun-kissed seashore . . . whose Capital, Atlanta, is steeped in American history and tradition.

● GEORGIA . . . Largest state east of the Mississippi, whose progress is measured by Seven-League boots.

● GEORGIA . . . Discovered in 1540 by Hernando DeSoto, the Spanish Explorer . . . Colonized in 1733 by General James Edward Oglethorpe and a group of Englishmen seeking a new way of life.

● GEORGIA . . . Whose rapid progress in developing her economy has been spectacular . . . the value of her factory products now surpasses that of her farm products.

● GEORGIA . . . First in sea island cotton, sixth in all types of cotton. First in peanuts and pecans . . . four times as much commercial output as any other state. Fifth in lumbering . . . her rich pine forests produce more than half of all resin and turpentine in the United States. World's largest market for naval stores . . . a growing automobile manufacturing center . . . second in mica mining. First American bauxite discovered in Georgia. Her marble and granite are found in many famous edifices the world over . . . and don't forget those luscious Georgia Peaches . . . and watermelons.

More than four centuries ago the Spanish came to the shore of Georgia seeking gold. Less than two hundred years later a band of Englishmen colonized in Georgia with the hope of freedom and liberty in their hearts. The history of Georgia is the story of progress . . . industrial, agricultural and social. It was in Georgia that Dr. Crawford W. Long used ether anesthesia in a major operation, marking a milestone in medical science. It was Georgia who first declared that married women should have full property rights . . . and it was Georgia who first lowered the voting age to 18. Though her development harks back to the days of the thirteen original States who signed the Declaration of Independence, Georgia is still young and vigorous . . . still seeking new frontiers. We fully appreciate the heavy responsibility that rests with us today . . . in many ways, they are as serious as they were when Georgia first fought the battle for freedom in the days of the Revolutionary War. It is the responsibility of working energetically, intelligently, and in harmony for a lasting peace. That is why the Georgia State Society welcomes this courtesy of the Hecht Company to tell our neighbors something of the greatness of our Home State . . . for knowledge will always foster tolerance and understanding.
